STEEL FACTS TOLD BY GARY

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Revealing how the United States Steel Corporation controls all of its subsidiary companies and practically all the steel business of the country, E. H. Gary, head of that corporation, went on the stand before the special investigating commission of the House to-day.

Chairman Stanley first ascertained from Mr. Gary that he was the chief executive officer, chairman of the board of directors and chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, and that, in addition, he was also a director in the various subsidiary companies owned by the Steel Trust.

Mr. Gary was pressed to explain who appoints the directors of the nine subsidiary companies.

"The stockholders name the directors," he replied, "but if you ask for an individual, I suppose I am the one who names the directors."

Mr. Gary then admitted to the committee that the Steel Corporation is not an operating company, that it manufactures no steel itself, but that it absolutely dominates the several subsidiary companies that do manufacture the product.

"The products of these co-related companies," said Mr. Gary, "are turned into the treasury of the United States Steel Corporation and that corporation distributes the profits as it sees fit."

Big Corporation Fixes Prices.

"Suppose two of the subsidiary companies manufacture the same product?" asked Chairman Stanley. "Does the parent company fix the price for both of the manufacturing companies?"

Mr. Gary admitted that the United States Steel Corporation fixed the price.

The committee also drew from Gary, who declared that he wanted to be frank and truthful, that but little discussion is left to the individual companies, but that the policy and administration of all of these companies are controlled by the holding company, the United States Steel Corporation.

"Of course," said Mr. Gary, "these smaller companies have their boards of directors and officers, but it goes without saying that if the management was displeasing to the United States Steel Corporation the directors would be displaced sooner or later.

Reviews Gates's Testimony.

"It might not be done in a day or a month, but eventually it would be done. The United States Steel Corporation owns most of the stock of all these companies and naturally it would dictate the policy of them."

Mr. Gary then reviewed some of the transactions testified to by J. W. Gates, who appeared before the committee a few days ago. Gates explained how the Gary-Morgan-Frick syndicate had assumed control of all the large steel concerns in the country by means of a holding company with no plants of its own.

Mr. Gary was accompanied to-day by P. C. Roberts and Norman Ream, directors of the Steel Trust; W. B. Dickson and James Gayley, former vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation; W. J. Filbert, assistant to Mr. Gary, and Richard Lindabury, counsel for the corporation.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, June 1.—With a chance to tie the Athletics for second place in the great race for the American League pennant, the Boston Red Sox went after to-day's game with Chicago cheered on to their best efforts by the biggest midweek crowd of the local season.

The weather came to bat nobly for the occasion, but it would have required a deluge of rain, hail, sleet and snow to keep the people away from the park this afternoon. The fans were hungry for a sight of their favorites after the long absence of Patsy's brave boys, and they were thankful that the sun shone and that the air was warm, for the conditions saved them from the danger of renewing their Winter colds.

A victory over Chicago and a defeat for Philadelphia at the hands of Cleveland meant joint possession of second place. But the Sox knew they could not accomplish their share of this task without a struggle. The visiting Sox were just as anxious to win as they were. Chicago's sentiment in the matter was revealed by Manager Duffy's announcement that he would pitch either "Doc" White or Ed Walsh, probably the latter.

They Both Fight Hard.

Games between Chicago and Boston are usually full of fight and real ball playing. This one promised to be more thrilling than usual because the series at Chicago resulted in an even break, and each team was anxious to jump ahead.

The fans gave Heinie Wagner a warm welcome. It was his 1911 debut in Boston as a real player, although he had appeared as pinch hitter on one or two occasions. They also were cordial toward Harry Lord, their old favorite; Hugh Duffy and Pat Dougherty, former heroes in Boston; Jimmy Callahan, chief of the "comebacks"; Ed Walsh, the king of the spitballists, and our own Joe Wood, whose great pitching on foreign fields made the team's good showing possible.

The game was booked to begin at 3:30, but long before that hour the crowds began pouring in and it became apparent that a real baseball throng would be on hand at the call of play.

Manager Donovan favored Ray Collins as his pitcher, but said he wouldn't make up his mind until he saw two or three of his trusties warm up.

For a little over two weeks, Red Sox

PLEAD RIGHT OF JEWS IN RUSSIA

Representative Martin M. Lomasney, former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Lee Friedman, a lawyer, and D. Hertz to-day argued before the legislative Committee of Federal Relations for the adoption of resolutions calling upon President Taft, the State Department in Washington and Congress to terminate treaty relations with Russia unless the alleged discrimination by that country against American passports in the hands of Jewish citizens is stopped. The resolutions were introduced by Representative Lomasney.

Representative Lomasney said that under a recent ruling the rich Jewish merchants are to be allowed to travel in Russia for business purposes, but there should be no discrimination between the rich and the poor man."

Lee Freidman said that the recent efforts of hte State Department have simply resulted in changing the office where the passports are vised from the Russian State Department to the Russian Ambassador.

FORMER SENATOR DAVID D. LEAHY, WHO DIED TO-DAY

EX-SENATOR LEAHY DEAD

David D. Leahy, member of the city of Boston's law department, former Senator and one of the best known politicians in the State, died early to-day after a lingering illness. He is survived by a wife, formerly Miss Margaret Fitzgerald of South Boston, and one son, four years old.

Mr. Leahy died at the home of his wife's father, William Fitzgerald, No. 609 East Ninth street, South Boston. He went there about a week ago after a four months' stay in the Catskills.

Worked Hard for City.

During recent years Mr. Leahy distinguished himself by his work in behalf of better health conditions in Boston's tenement districts. He handled prosecutions for the city of Boston of violations of the health regulations and building laws.

Mr. Leahy was thirty-five years old. He was born in the South End, and received his training in the public schools and in Boston College. Later he took a law degree at Boston University.

When he was hardly out of law school, Mr. Leahy surprised everybody, including himself, by capturing a seat in the House of Representatives from Ward 12. He served in the House for two years, and then won out for the Senate in a district supposed to be a Republican stronghold. The Republicans had to gerrymander the district in order to keep him from going to the Senate as long as he cared to.

Catskill Stay Fruitless.

In 1907 Mr. Leahy was appointed to the city of Boston law department by Mayor Fitzgerald. The appointment was a recognition of the James H. Doyle forces. Mr. Leahy took a leave of absence from the law department early this year and went to the Catskills to recuperate from a throat affection contracted in an automobile ride at night from Monponsett to Boston last Fall. His ailment increased, however, and he came back to Boston a week ago, with little hope of recovery.

B. & M. DIVIDEND CUT INDORSED

The Railroad Commission in two communications to the Legislature to-day justified the Boston & Maine Railroad in recent lowering of dividends and finds that there is no need of guard rails on elevated, tunnel and subway stations in Boston.

On the Boston & Maine dividend situation the commission says in part:

"In common with other railroads, large expenditures have been required for labor and materials. While the gross revenue from transportation shows an increase for the period of ten months ending March 31, 1911, over the corresponding period of 1910, operating expenses show a much larger increase for the same period. The estimates disclose that if the maximum estimate for increased revenue is sustained in fact for the year ending June 30, 1911, the minimum estimate for expenditures will necessarily show net corporate income applicable to dividends of a sum considerably less than that shown for the year ending June 30, 1910.

TRUSTS VS. CANADIAN TRADE BILL

WASHINGTON, June 1.—This is the way the battle against reciprocity shapes up to-day with formal hearings by the Senate Finance Committee concluded yesterday and a report without recommendation or amendment promised for next Wednesday, June 7:

The Criminal Trusts,
Selfish Private Interests } vs. The People
The Politicians

The one advantage that the people seem to enjoy right now is that the fight is at last to be brought into the open. The star chamber proceedings where "gentlemen's agreements" are made and legislation is throttled to suit the needs and plans of amalgamated greed are to give way to a stand-up fight where the people from the gallery may see and the knife cannot be driven into the measure without note being taken of the assassins.

There is to be an open counting of hands—the representatives of the desperately-driven corporations, the selfish conservators of private interests, the hard put politicians who are willing to sacrifice a principle on the profession of which they have prospered, to satisfy a petty political spite, are to be compelled to march in procession before the public and go on record regarding the measure which just now lies closest to the needs and desires of the great mass of the American people.

Root Loses Scrimmage.

Word comes from the committee room, where the bill has been tossed scornfully about ever since it was messaged over from the House of Representatives, that the public demand for action is at length to be heeded to the extent of bringing the measure out and without amendment.

Root loses the first scrimmage, therefore—if this is true—for a few days ago when the AMERICAN first called attention to the treachery that the New York Senator was practicing toward his friend, President Taft, there was a clear majority of two in favor of that amendment which would cut from the pact all hope of free print paper and subject the people indefinitely to the exactions of Mr. Root's good friends, the Paper Trust.

150 KILLED WHEN MAGAZINE BLOWS UP

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Advices received by the State Department to-day say that 150 persons were killed by the explosion of the arsenal at Managua last night, when it is believed enemies of President Diaz of Nicaragua were conspiring to overthrow the government. The consular officers made only a brief report and gave no details of the affair. The first unofficial reports stated that only twenty had been killed.

WALTHAM MAN HELD ON BIGAMY CHARGE

Lewis R. Wallace of No. 94 Brown street, Waltham, was held in $1,000 for the grand jury to-day in that city on a bigamy charge. The complainant is Mrs. Olive Wallace of Ashburnham. She obtained a divorce from Wallace for desertion and he was forbidden to marry within two years. On April 26, eighteen months after, he married Miss Lillian Grimes of this city, a watch factory employe. Wallace is thirty-two years old and is employed as a towerman by the Boston & Maine.

REINA-MERCEDES GOES TO BROOKLYN

NEWPORT, June 1.—For the first time since her assignment to Newport, following her capture during the Spanish war by the American fleet at Santiago, the training ship Reina-Mercedes sailed from the Newport naval station to-day. On board were 125 men. She is en route for the Brooklyn navy yard, where she is to be overhauled.

MRS. WILSON'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Wilson, seventy-five, who died at her home, No. 1654 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, on Monday, was held this afternoon at the Mount Auburn Mortuary Chapel. Rev. S. M. Crothers of the First Parish Unitarian Church officiated. The body will be cremated.

Principals in Bathtub Mystery

Mrs. Lillian G. Scheib, whose body was found in tub.

Henry A. Scheib, or Hugh A. Sherman, held on suspicion of having killed his wife.

SAYS MRS. BULL LIKED SWAMI

ALFRED, Me., June 1.—East Indian Swami, the Boses of Calcutta and the question of "harmful influences" upon Mrs. Ole Bull were introduced when the contest over Mrs. Bull's will was resumed before Judge Hobbs to-day.

Joseph G. Thorp, brother of Mrs. Bull, executor of her will and uncle of Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, the daughter who is contesting the will, was on the witness stand again. He was questioned at length by Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Mrs. Vaughan, or Olea, as she was frequently designated in the examination. Letters between Thorp and Olea and from Mrs. Bull to Olea were introduced by Mr. Whipple, whose questions tended to bring out whether or not Mrs. Vaughan was being kept from her mother and by whose direction.

One of the pointed questions by Mr. Whipple to Thorp was:

"Did you not know that Olea thought Mrs. Bull was surrounded by people exerting harmful influence on her?"

Thorp answered: "No."

Then Mr. Whipple asked:

Bull Liked Mystics.

"And did you think that this congregation of Swami and Mrs. Briggs (Mrs. Daniels Briggs of Waltham) and the Boses was entirely agreeable to her (Mrs. Bull)?"

"Yes," replied Thorp, "she always treated them courteously. She treated Miss Noble affectionately."

Thorp said Mrs. Bull would kiss Miss Noble when they met and parted, but that Mrs. Bull did not kiss the Boses.

A letter from Olea to Thorp was read in which Olea complained bitterly at being unable to stand between her mother "and harmful influences."

In the next paragraph Olea accused Thorp of shutting her out from her share of responsibility for her mother.

Before court opened to-day there was a mysterious conference of an hour between Judge Hobbs and counsel for and against the will. No explanation of this conference was vouchsafed by court or attorneys. It held up the opening of court till 9:50. Then Mr. Thorp, brother of Mrs. Bull and executor of her will, resumed the witness stand.

Mr. Whipple introduced a letter written by Mrs. Vaughan to Thorp from West Lebanon, Me., on December 9, 1910, as follows:

Dear Uncle Joe: I am sorry to have been so long in reply to your letters. The last one sent to Norway reached me when I was quite ill and the reply which I wrote seemed so inadequately expressed that I did not send it. Your second letter, sent here after my return, was even more disturbing to answer it. I cannot understand what the foundation in your mind can be for your attitude toward me. Your remarks, twice emphasized, that I must feel myself bound to obey the

ARREST GIRL ON BIGAMY CHARGE

Flossie M. Williams, a pretty girl, stylishly dressed in a tailor made suit and wearing a big picture hat, was arrested in Lynn to-day on a charge of bigamy. It is the first time in the police history of that city that such a charge has been made against a woman.

She was arrested in Scollay square, Boston, to-day, by Inspector William Thorne of Lynn and taken to Lynn, where the warrant for her arrest was issued. Her husbands, the police say, are Joseph Belcher of Stoneham and Charles Lane of Winthrop. Belcher is the complainant.

When the girl was booked at headquarters she at first said she was Flossie M. Williams. She is a Stoneham girl, where her family is highly respected. According to the police, Belcher, the complainant, told them:

"I married this girl on October 2, 1905, and we had two children. We lived happily together for four years and then she disappeared. I heard that she had married again, but it took a long time to locate her. I finally found she was living in the West End in Boston."

The girl was arrested on the charge that she had been married on September 25 last to Lane. This marriage ceremony was performed by City Clerk Atwill of Lynn. It is said that the girl did not live long with her second husband and that she went to work in a Boston department store.

Between sobs while at the police headquarters to-day she made this statement to the police.

"Yes, I was married twice. My first marriage was a very unhappy one. Although I separated from my husband, Mr. Blecher, yet I never intended to marry again.

"I met Mr. Lane in Winthrop and I don't marriage was a very unhappy one. Al- with him. It seems all so strange, as if I had been drugged or hypnotized.

"When I learned that I was married to him I tried to make the best of it, and I have tried to keep the matter quiet because I knew that if my parents heard of it that it would break their hearts. Please [illegible] let them find out about this in Stoneham."

FATHER TO VIEW TUB VICTIM

Weeping bitterly, Connor C. O'Grady, the father of Elizabeth C. Scheib, the victim of the strange bathtub murder in New York, took the train at Springfield at 11:47 o'clock to-day for New York, where he will see if he can identify the remains discovered in the tub as those of his daughter.

O'Grady will also face Henry A. Scheib, or Hugh Allerton Sherman, as O'Grady knew the husband of his daughter, and thus clear up the identity of the dead woman. Even if the father does not recognize the body he will know Scheib. The train reached New York at 3:15 this afternoon.

"I am positive," said Mr. O'Grady, as he was getting on the train, "that the dead girl is my daughter. It is my poor little girl. The letters signed, 'Father,' convinced me of her identity."

Police Telephoned Him.

"I did not want to go to New York, but the police of that city called me to-day on the telephone and persuaded me to come. I could not conceive of any reason why Sherman should have killed my daughter. It is an awful shock to me and to my family."

Chief of Police Quilty of Springfield accompanied Mr. O'Grady to the train and he made the trip alone the rest of the way.

O'Grady's daughter was a Chicopee girl and had some training as a hospital nurse. Her sister, Miss Marietta R. O'Grady, is a teacher in the Chicopee schools.

The cause of the crime and the manner of it are baffling the New York detectives. Professor Larkin of Columbia University is making a chemical analysis of the viscera and of the peculiar solution in which the body lay in the bathtub, to ascertain if he can find anything on which the police can base a charge of murder.

Love Letters in Case.

Scheib is held by the police on suspicion. The inquest by the coroner's jury was set for this afternoon. It is expected that the police will make a charge of murder against him, basing it on a letter signed "Anna" written to Scheib in an affectionate vein which indicates that the man's wife was jealous of his attentions to other women.

The prisoner first stated to the police that he had written the letter to himself to make his wife jealous. After he had consulted a lawyer he changed this story, denying that he wrote the letter.

Miss Mae Blake's account of what Harry Scheib told her of his wife's death may form the most important link in the chain of circumstantial evidence that is forming, little by little, around the chauffeur. Miss Blake is an usher in the Lyric Theatre, New York.

She said that she had known both Harry and Lillian Scheib very well three years ago—so well that she and Mrs. Scheib exchanged pictures.

"I knew them for several months, when we all lived in a lodging house at No. 117 West Sixty-third street," said Miss Blake. "They were a most affectionate couple. She had a nickname for him—'Hughey'—and invariably used it. He was most attentive to her. He was then a chauffeur, and, busy as he was, he never failed to do the marketing. That is, he always went to the store and bought the things for them to eat. His fondness for her was the talk of the house. It was then that she gave me her picture.

Startled at Meeting.

"After a while I moved away and went to live with the Darteldes at No. 141 West Sixty-second street. Mrs. Bartelde's daughter Ada is also an usher at the Lyric and she and I are great friends. I have often spoken to her of the Scheibs and wondered what had become of them.

"I did not see them or hear anything from them until one day in the middle of last March, when I was walking along Eighth avenue. I was startled by a man rushing out of a restaurant and tapping me on the shoulder. It was Harry Scheib. He said he was awfully glad to see me and then exclaimed:

"'Isn't it too bad about Lillian?'

"I asked him what he meant and he said she had died two weeks before. He told me that she had been taken down with pneumonia and he had taken her to the German Hospital. She lived only three days, according to what he said. He told me how her lips had swollen with the fever and that she looked very ugly in death.

"Then he went on to tell how he had taken her body to her home in Massachusetts. It was Holyoke or Springfield, I do not remember which. He told me about the services at the church; how all the people in the town turned out at the

STEAMERS NEAR CRASH IN HARBOR

The steamship Ransom B. Fuller of the Portland line missed by an arm's length sinking the Nantasket boat, Old Colony, in the thick fog off Nix's Mate last night. Collision was averted only by rapid action on the part of both captains.

The Fuller had left her berth here about 7 o'clock, although Captain Endicott had not wanted to risk the danger of the heavy fog. She had been out about forty minutes, whistles tooting all the time.

Sudenly out of the fog ahead came an answering blast. Captain Endicott blew a short whistle and there came another straight ahead. Then he sounded two blasts and reversed the engines. Almost in the same moment out of the smother loomed up the bow of the Old Colony.

Both captains realized their peril at the same moment and the captain of the Old Colony saw that his only chance lay in speeding across the port bow of the bigger vessel. He put on full speed ahead and with the speed of the Fuller slackened by the reversing of the engines just managed to cut across without striking.

There was intense excitement on both ships as the passengers ran from the points at which it looked as if the boats would come together, but it was soon apparent that danger was past and after the women aboard were quieted, the Fuller proceeded and the Old Colony made her way up to her Boston pier.

Count Tolstoi's Son Is Accused of Bigamy.

PARIS.—The magnificent wedding in 1910 of Alexandre Koutuzow, a son of Count Paul Tolstoi, to Miss Mary Frothingham, an American, was recalled here to-day when the Count was served with a writ sworn out by Florian Maria Coriat, alleging that she had married Koutuzow in London in 1893. She charged desertion and bigamy. The Count denies the charges and in an interview said that when he was engaged to Miss Frothingham he was menaced by the Coriat woman, who, he thought, was dead. He asked the Holy Synod of the Russian Church not to admit the marriage.

LAST CONTEST SPRINT IS ON

By The CONTEST EDITOR.

A fortnight more will decide who is to become the owner of that $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

The same time will decide the winners of the 999 other magnificent prizes in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest. The automobiles, the motor boats, the pianos and the other valuable articles are to go to some fortunate winners then.

This big Contest, begun on January 15 last, is to come to a close on June 15. That is only two weeks from to-day. It seemed when this Contest started as though it was a very long one—as if the finish was so distant that no one need worry about it.

But the finish is right at hand now. A fortnight more will tell the story.

The last special offer—the May special—has expired. It came to a close last night. The winners of the forty-two special May prizes will be announced on Sunday, June 11.

The polls have closed for the next list of candidates' standing with vote totals. This list was closed last night. The list itself will also be printed on Sunday, the 11th.

Candidates cannot do any more work now, so far as the May prizes or the next list are concerned.

But they can and must do all the work they are able before the main Contest closes. This final fortnight must mean one grand whirl of constant effort. It may spell victory or defeat for any candidate. No one knows what hundreds and thousands of votes and subscriptions will be turned in by the real energetic workers between now and June 15. This last spurt counts in all races, whether on a running track or in a big Contest like this.

The leaders for the capital prize and the big district leaders know this well. They are not slacking up their efforts for a minute.

The thing for every candidate to do is to go over his or her campaign field with a fine-tooth comb and get in every subscription, vote and coupon that has so far escaped. Watch out particularly for the big ten-vote Sunday coupon. There are two more Sundays before the Contest closes, June 4 and June 11. There should be enough Sunday coupons on those two dates alone to make a big difference in the vote standing.

See your friends and campaign workers. Impress upon them that this is the beginning of the end.

The Contest is down to the final days. It is a matter of hours—of minutes.

Why People Lose Their Hair

The most common cause of loss of hair, dandruff and itching scalp is neglect.

Leading authorities like Dr. J. C. Bayles and Dr. Woods Hutchinson, of New York, and Professor Lassar, of Germany, recommend frequent washing. The best thing for the purpose is a shampoo made of fine creamy Soap, Glycerin, White of Eggs, Cocoanut Oil and Salicylic Acid. Birt's Head Wash contains these ingredients. It cleans the hair, opens up the pores of the scalp, and is invigorating to the hair roots.

It does more to prevent the loss of hair than all so-called "tonics" put together. In hygienic tubes, 25c. At all drug and department stores.

PLYMOUTH GIRL FIRE HEROINE

Annie Ellis, aged fifteen, saved the lives of her little brother and sister early to-day, when fire destroyed the two-tenement house on Summer street, Plymouth, occupied by Mrs. Fanny Pazansky and two children and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Ellis and three children.

The fire started in the attic and spread quickly to the main hallway. Annie was awakened by the crackling of flames. She rushed into the next room where her brother and sister were asleep. She took her sister in her arms, and, dragging her brother, rushed down the stairs, screaming "Fire." Her parents made their escape a few seconds later. Mrs. Pazansky and her two children got out just in time. All escaped in their nightclothes.

The fire was in the centre of the tenement district and two alarms were rung. A high wind made a grave danger of the flames spreading to surrounding tenements. The fact that there had been a heavy rain and that the roofs of surrounding buildings were wet undoubtedly saved a much heavier loss.

The house where the fire started is a total loss and the occupants lost all their belongings. The house is owned by Meyer Markus of Boston, who says there is no insurance. The second alarm caused considerable excitement in the town and several thousand people got out to watch the flames.

MISS DAVIS, ONE OF SOCIETY BRIDES IN BOSTON TO-DAY

2 VINCENT CLUB BRIDES TO-DAY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

The long procession of June brides made its first appearance to-day with two of the loveliest of the lot in the lead, for both pretty Sarah Pierce and winsome Susan Fellowes Davis chose to-day for their weddings.

Miss Davis's wedding to James Edwin Gardner, Jr., took place at the First Unitarian Church at Milton at 4.15 this afternoon and was followed by a brilliant reception at the Davis home, Carmarthen, in East Milton.

Miss Davis, who is as popular as she is pretty, inaugurated an interesting novelty in the way of attendants, and instead of one maid of honor, as has always been the custom since weddings began, she had two, her sister, Miss Pauline Lamber Davis, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Mary Prince Gardner, both debutantes of the last Winter.

List of Bridesmaids.

The picturesque group of bridesmaids included Miss Martha Peabody, Miss Ruth Wigglesworth, Miss Charlotte Fellowes Harding and Rachel Brewer of Milton, Gertrude Sturgis of Boston and Annie Tinker of New York.

John Norris Thorne of New York, a Harvard classmate of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers included Nathaniel Fellowes Davis and J. Winthrop Davis, brothers of the bride; Richard Eustis and Henry Durant of Cambridge; Augustus P. Loring, Jr., whose wedding is to take place the 22d, and John Marsh of New York, all Harvard men.

The Rev. James DeNormandie of the First Church, Roxbury, performed the ceremony.

Miss Pierce's wedding to Dr. James Lincoln Huntington took place in the First Parish Church in Brookline at 4 o'clock. On account of the illness of the bride's mother it was as simple as possible, and there was no reception. The Rev. Samuel Smith Drury, who recently married Cornelia Thayer, and who has just returned from the honeymoon trip abroad, performed the ceremony.

Also in Vincent Club.

Dr. Huntington, who is the son of Mrs. George P. Huntington and a grandson of the late Bishop Huntington, was one of the ushers at the Drury-Thayer wedding.

Miss Pierce is one of the four handsome daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce of Brookline and like Miss Davis, is a prominent member of the Vincent Club. She was given in marriage by her father, but had no attendants.

Frederick Dane Huntington, Harvard '12, was the best man, and the ushers were Dr. Vincent, with whom Dr. Huntington makes his home in Beacon street; Dr. Arthur Ruggles, Dr. Charles Day, Dr. Robert Green, Dr. Henry James and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, Richard Hale and Robert Barbour.

The young couple will make their future home in Marlboro street.

COUNTY CLERK GETS 'CONSCIENCE MONEY'

Clerk F. A. Campbell of the Suffolk Superior Court has received an unsigned letter containing $1, of which sixty cents is "conscience money." The balance of the remittance is to advertise the receipt of the sixty cents. What the 'conscience fund" is for is not indicated.

HAS WHOOPING COUGH SOCIAL

BROCKTON, June 1.—Whooping cough parties are the latest social whoop among the little folk.

J. Anson Brock, aged five, started it. J. Anson had planned a birthday party at his home on Holland terrace. His mamma told him he could invite twenty of his little playmates. Invitations were sent out and J. Anson was in a whirl of excitement.

Then an unexpected guest arrived a few days before the party in the form of Mr. W. Hooping Cough, which seized upon little J. Anson and kept him out of school.

When the day of the party arrived Anson's mamma, Mrs. John J. Brock, said:

"I'm afraid, dearie, you can't have your party. You'd give the whooping cough to your guests."

J. Anson was about ready to cry. But he squeezed back the tears like a little man. Meanwhile his brain was working on the high speed. He thought and thought. Then he had the brilliant idea.

"Mamma," he said, eagerly, "why can't I give a whooping cough party to the boys and girls who have it same as me?"

"Why, dearie, I don't know," said mamma doubtfully.

"O, please," said J. Anson. "there's enough of 'em got it to make a party. Lessee—there's Eleanor Hayward, she's got it, and Dickie Barrett and Margaret Mullin and her sister Edna, and—and—Donald Blake, he's got it—and so has Willie Mullin—that's six and I make seven and we can have a party and they won't catch it from me 'cos they all got it already."

"Why, I'll see," said mamma and she called up Mrs. Mullin on the telephone.

Mrs. Mullin, when it was explained to her, said Edna and Margaret and Willie could come over to the Brock house for a whooping cough party. So could Eleanor Hayward and Dickie Barrett and Donald Drake.

Pretty soon the wee whoopers came whooping in. They were greeted with whoops by the whooping host. They played games and tried to keep as quiet as possible and not talk too much, so that they wouldn't irritate their throats.

Mamma Brock suggested for one game that they roll their whoops, but the children thought she couldn't quite mean that because they said: "We can't roll hoop indoors."

So mamma only smiled at them.

But mamma played another little joke on them when refreshments were served. She brought out a bottle of cough medicine and said:

"Now, everybody must take a first course of medicine for the throat before eating anything. Come, Anson, you take yours first."

So Anson took his medicine.

WOMEN CALL FOR TEACHERS' INCREASE

The School Voters' League, an organization of women, is urging the Legislature to pass the teachers' salary bill over the veto of Governor Foss. In a letter sent to members signed by President Fanny B. Ames and Secretary Susan Y. Fitzgerald the arguments for passage of the bill over the veto are advanced. The league points out that the bill was presented to the Legislature after the teachers had been advised by the School Board to take that action, and that the higher paid teachers are quite in sympathy with those of the elementary grades. It is also shown that the increase in income of $200,281 and a surplus from last year of $35,000 might be used in increasing other salaries not provided for in the disputed bill.

Friday Three-Hour Sales

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?" A famous American wit once said of a certain public man, "The meanest thing that I can say of him, is simply to pronounce his name." Reversing this sentiment in our application, perhaps the BEST thing that we can say of the Three-Hour-Sales is, simply to name them. They have told their own story to the people many times in the last ten years, and the people have "wintered and summered" with them as long. People know just what the sales stand for, and this fact stands for an unprecedented success.

RECIPROCITY FORCES LINE UP---PEOPLE AGAINST TRUSTS

weaknesses of that great Executive, believes that there will be clear sailing for reciprocity, however, by reason of the fact that the bill is to come from the committee without having been amended.

The truth is that the big battle is to come.

It might have been hoped that a committee containing nine members of the Republican party would have been disposed without quibble or delay to report with a favorable recommendation a measure endorsed and demanded by an overwhelming majority of the people, and recommended by a Republican President.

There, however, was where reciprocity struck its first snag. Of the Republicans on the committee, but two were found whose private obligations and congenital predilections toward corporate greed did not dictate determined opposition to the agreement.

Call the roll of the committee, and Penrose of Pennsylvania and Cullom of Illinois, of all the Republicans, alone were free to answer aye on a motion to favorably report the bill.

Reflects Senate Sentiment.

For the rest, the interests that jammed through the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and the private political spite of one progressive member of the committee blew cold against the proposition. And when the President turned to the Democrats, as he did in the House, the sinister form of Bailey rose up with Simmons of North Carolina at his side. The hope of sending the bill out of the Senate with a recommendation that it pass, paled before the fear that this Republican-Democratic coalition against a measure to reduce the cost of living might even be sent back to the Senate with a recommendation that it be defeated, or that it might even be buried in committee and never be reported at all.

The situation that was presented in the committee, it is now found, accurately reflects the sentiment of the Senate itself with regard to the measure whose fate is shortly to be decided.

RECIPROCITY FIRST CONCERTED BLOW AT HIGH PROTECTION

Reciprocity is cheaper living through reduced tariffs and unrestricted supply of food and clothing. And that is its stumbling block. It is the first definite and concerted blow at the high protective tariff—mother of trusts—under which the great industrial combinations have waxed fat and prospered and the swollen fortunes have accumulated with which courts and Legislatures are now dealing in another way.

Strivings of Half Century.

The reciprocity trade agreement with Canada represents the strivings of half a century of two great nations to end the commercial strife that has existed between them, and agree upon a national system of exchange of foodstuffs whereby the common people of both may reap the benefits of cheapened food and clothing. It is based upon the give-and-take principle, by which each nation relinquishes somewhat of the excessive tariff taxes which have been imposed upon the exports of the other, to the end that the consumer in both nations, by a free movement of food and clothing across the border may benefit by the reductions.

Reciprocity is cheaper living through reduced tariffs and unrestricted supply of food and clothing.

And that is its stumbling block. It is the first definite and concerted blow at the high protective tariff—mother of trusts—under which the great industrial combinations have waxed fat and prospered and the swollen fortunes have accumulated with which courts and legislatures are now dealing in another way.

With reciprocity assured through the co-operation of the Democrats—facing unanimous support if the Republicans hold fast to their protestations of the past, a change came over the spirit of Republican dreams. Those controlling elements of the party which had supplied it with the sinews of war, which ruled its destinies, ordered a switch over night.

The precious and profitable doctrine of protection was endangered, the opening wedge was about to be inserted—privilege and profit were imperilled, and the result was brought about which the people face in the Senate of the United States today.

Corporations vs. the People.

It is corporate greed, selfish interests and petty politics against the will of the people. But great as the alliance is, President Taft does not lose hope that with the aid of the people in the bitter fight that is now to be precipitated, the people may sway sufficient Senators who still feel the force of public sentiment to snatch the victory in an hour when defeat seems perilously near.

One may easily imagine the hosts entering the arena. All the old familiar faces are here. Bear in mind that this is not a political fight. Party lines disappear when the sacred interests are attacked; and the danger is vital now. A Democratic House of Representatives has sent reciprocity over to the Senate marked with its indorsement. The interests have their back against the wall. This is the last hope. If the opening wedge is driven in, the damage will be great, but it will be nothing compared with what may follow when the people observe the effect of moderate tariff reduction and the consequent cheapening of the cost of living. The whole structure of protection may thereupon be attacked and razed to the revenue level.

Next Comes Smoot.

Smoot next, bearing aloft a sunburst of banners representative of all the interests of the Mormon church, with Sutherland as his aid, carrying a banner on which is engraved the insignia of the Utah Jack Mormon Association.

Dupont next in line, sympathetically solicitous for the interests of the Powder Trust, with which he severed connection when he entered the Senate, though that did not prevent him from being indicted for having, as a member of the trust, violated the Sherman anti-trust law.

Briggs of New Jersey enters, official in half a dozen big corporations that eye reciprocity askance; Oliver of Pennsylvania, careful of the interests of steel; Heyburn of Idaho eager for the welfare of the Smelters' Trust; John Walter Smith of Maryland, an humble laborer in the lumber case, and doing odd chores as a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Root Enters Procession.

Enter the procession then: Root, as is eminently fitting and proper in the lead, bearing the banner of the paper trust, but holding the commission of the entire Plunderbund, for he "tells them how." Root, observe, is the former counsel of Boss Tweed and the more fortunate Thomas F. Ryan. He was a little more fortunate than Tweed himself, for the indictment was never pressed.

Close behind Root, Bailey—observe the beautiful non-partisan flavor of the procession. Bailey just now is carrying the standard of lumber—no pun intended—although he does bear the recollection of having carried the commission of Standard Oil in a not-to-be-forgotten contest. Back to the first love, however, and the banner of LUMBER and LORIMER waves over him as he swings down the aisle.

To the rear little Mr. Simmons of North Carolina, shadow of Bailey and acolyte of the high priest of lumber.

The group represents in its entirety the sinister influence of the big industrial and transportation interests of the nation whose creed is greed, and whose policy is self-interest.

All are opposed to reciprocity, because the triumph of the doctrine means the beginning of the end of privilege—the downfall of high taxes and the opening of the era of smaller profits, but cheaper food and clothing for the multitude.

By another door enters a second group—the army of selfish private interests.

Another Group Enters.

Gronna of North Dakota, in the lead, the greatest wheat grower in the Senate. Reciprocity spells for him reduced profits, and, though it spells also cheaper flour and cheaper bread for the consumer, his face is set against the pact.

Warren of Wyoming, whose sheep flocks graze upon thousands of acres; Gamble of North Dakota and McCumber of the same State, large land owners both, whose values may decline in the uplifting of the common welfare, and old Knute Nelson of Minnesota.

And they, too, frown upon reciprocity, for food is cheap enough to suit their means and clothing cannot go so high that they will not be comfortably dressed.

Finally the third division and most disconcerting of all the enemies of the pact, file in—that band of Republican insurgents who by battling for lower tariff duties through two sessions of Congress have lighted the only hope that has burned for the common herd in a generation of policies and parties.

Yet here they march—their backs to the rising sun—their faces set against the issue which they vitalized into life—back in the fold, allied once more with these representatives of the vested interests, the standpat element whom they have crucified and pilloried in a thousand speeches:

Cummins, La Follette, Bourne, Bristow, Clapp, Borah—each a man whose name has stood for the classes against the masses—enrolled now with the army of privilege, enlisted for the war to defeat the very cause in support and defence of which insurgency sprang into being.

Saddest Picture of All.

There's the saddest picture of all. The group commanded by Root frankly stands for that corporate greed in which they have always been enlisted.

The group of private interests at least has self-interest on which to justify its creed.

But the insurgents? Put to the test, the issue upon which they have made their greatest fight, namely, lower taxes and reduced cost of living for the people, certain of success with their undivided support, they stand aside and the cause is put in direct peril for their recreancy.

They, too, oppose reciprocity—that is, the reciprocity proposed by Taft. Most of them will rise when the procession is over, and the bill is before the Senate and ready for debate, and propose amendments by which they will urge the part may be made so perfect that insurgency, too, may support it.

But reciprocity that come from the Senate amended is reciprocity that is dead and not worth the paper it is written upon, and the insurgents know it and are intent, like Root, upon their course.

It is a situation which only the united protest of the people can cope with.

Lodge stalks alone, nestling to his warm heart the sacred codfish of Massachusetts, which he is willing to abandon, however, if Root succeeds, after the manner of Edward Hines, in putting the paper amendment "across."

The New England interests are splendidly represented. Dr. Gallinger, who aspired to be a Republican leader of the Senate, and Burnham, his colleague; Page and Dillingham, of Vermont, and Frye, of Maine—all stiffened in their opposition to the Republican policy of reciprocity because the party and its mainstays have fallen out over policies, and they prefer the mainstay to the party.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

CALL MINISTER IN STOCK TRIAL

Facts were brought out to-day at the trial of the Rev. Norman Plass, Charles H. Brooks and John I. Trahegan, formerly of the Redeemable Investment Company, to show that the promoters of the company made a special effort to induce clergymen and church-going people to purchase their stocks and bonds.

It is charged by the government that the defendants conspired to defraud their customers. It has been estimated that the company sold $2,000,000 of their stocks and bonds.

A clergyman was called to the stand to-day to sustain the contention of the United States district attorney. He was the Rev. J. Spencer Voorhees, formerly pastor of a church at North Adams.

Mr. Voorhees was a selling agent of the company and District Attorney French sought to introduce a bundle of letters that it was said would throw a flood of light on the manner in which the company caught their victims.

Samuel Elder, counsel for the defendants, objected to the introduction at this time of the letters, thirty-two in number, and Judge Dodge ordered that they be marked for identification and given to Mr. Elder to read. Judge Dodge will pass upon their admissibility as evidence later.

Some of the letters showed that Voorhees was to be given a drawing acount of $100 a month, which was to be deducted from his commission of ten per cent. At the end of six months, if his commission had not amounted to $600, the guarantee was to be withdrawn.

POPE MUCH BETTER; GIVES BLESSING TO VICTOR IN AIR RACE

ROME, June 1. — So many alarming rumors regarding the health of the Pope are abroad that Dr. Petacci, physician to the Pontiff, has issued the following statement:

"His Holiness is much better. All immediate danger of cardiac complications has passed. The gouty symptoms slightly diminished."

The Pope witnessed the triumphal arrival of Aviator Beaumont, who flew right over the Vatican, and gave him the papal blessing.

REPORT DIRECT NOMINATION BILL

The direct nominations bill, providing for direct nominations in all State elections, was reported back to-day by the Ways and Means Committee of the Senate. The vote in committee was unanimously in favor of reporting the measure.

WATCHMAN IS SHOT BY RIVAL

Louis Merritt, twenty-four years old, and a chauffeur, went out to the factory of the Shepard Silver Company in Melrose late last night to "get the first shot," so he told the police, at Jem Brooks, who had threatened his life, he said.

Early to-day he succeeded in getting into the factory. He hid on the first floor until the watchman had made his rounds. Then he slipped up to the office on the second floor, where Brooks, who is employed there as an engineer, was sleeping. By the aid of a pocket flashlight he fired two shots at Brooks, who lay outstretched with his arms under his head. One bullet passed through an arm and the other sank in the sleeper's breast.

Merritt fled as the watchman came running to the office and had made his escape before the police were notified. Two hours later a Malden policeman found him in Washington street, carrying his shoes in his hand and wearing a pair of "sneakers." Merritt was taken to the police station, where the police say a search revealed a revolver hidden in his stocking and a complete outfit of burglar's tools.

Police Say He Confessed.

By that time they had heard of the shooting and they sent for the Melrose policemen. When he was questioned by the latter Merritt confessed, the police say.

According to the Melrose authorities, Merritt explained that about two months ago he began to have trouble with Brooks in whose family he boarded at No. 6 Sussex street, Boston. Brooks was jealous of his wife. He is about forty and had brought the younger man to his home while Merritt was still employed in the same factory.

The trouble grew to such proportions, Merritt said, that Brooks threatened to "get him" at the first opportunity. Last night he made up his mind to take matters into his own hands and went out to the factory with the intention of ending the dispute by getting the first shot. He could not explain why he had the burglar's tools.

Brooks is in the Melrose Hospital in a serious condition.

Held in $7,000 Bail.

Merritt was charged in Melrose District Court with assault with intent to kill Brooks, and also with breaking and entering the factory at Melrose. He entered a plea of not guilty on both counts and was held in $2,000 on the breaking and entering and $5,000 on the assault charge.

He had been taken to the hospital, where Brooks identified him.

MRS. BULL'S LETTERS OFFERED AS EVIDENCE OF WILL CONSPIRACY request made of me without regard to their justice, does not certainly give me much hope for better things. For myself, I am only feeling anxiety and sorrow at being placed in a position where I cannot help mamma or stand between her and harmful influences.

Sympathy for Mother.

I am sorry that I can say that you should shut me out from my rightful place of sharing with you the responsibilities for my dear mother's treatment and plans. I am very thankful to see from mamma's letters that she feels a slight improvement in her condition, and I pray that her gain will soon be made permanent. It is heartbreaking to think of all she is going through.

Please give my love to you and Aunt Annie (Mrs. Thorp) and to the little girl. I hope you are all well, with the hope that brighter days will soon dawn for mamma and with gratitude for all the loving attentions that you are all showing her and which I know give her great happiness. Always affectionately, OLEA.

When court opened those present besides court, counsel and spectators included Thorp on the stand and Nicola Ruberto, Miss Siri Swanander and Mrs. Edith Swanander in the seats for witnesses. Miss Swanander is expected to resume the stand soon, to testify at greater length as to the closing weeks of Mrs. Bull's life.

Replies to Niece.

After reading the letter from Olea to Thorp Mr. Whipple introduced the letter which Thorp wrote to Olea in reply. In this letter Thorp remonstrated with Olea, charging his niece with putting a wrong construction on his writings. Thorp wrote Olea that it was necessary to keep her away from her mother to avoid "added anxiety and trouble," as he expressed it.

Then he added: "Miss Noble's coming was the tonic she (Mrs. Bull) needed."

Thorp also told Olea that Mrs. Bull would see her later. Then Mr. Whipple put a series of questions, thus:

Q.—Was Dr. Odams massaging Mrs. Bull at this time? A.—Yes, two or three times a week.

Q.—Was Miss Noble there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mrs. Briggs? A.—Occasionally. (Mrs. Briggs is Mrs. Marion Daniels Briggs of Waltham, friend of Mrs. Bull and interested in psychic studies. It was Mrs. Briggs who accused Mrs. May Wright Sewall of baneful influence over Mrs. Bull.)

Q.—Was Mrs. Briggs living apart from her husband at this time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you unaware that Mrs. Briggs was giving Mrs. Bull absent treatment? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know about the exercises in the meditation room? A.—No.

Q.—Did you keep a copy of this letter to Mrs. Vaughan? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it your habit to keep copies of your letters? A.—Only on occasions of special significance.

Q.—And was this such an occasion? A.—Yes.

Not Asked to Draw Will.

Q.—What was the date of this letter (the one to Olea) with relation to the date of signing the codicil to the will? A.—The day before.

Q.—Did your sister ever ask you to prepare her will? A.—No.

Q.—Mr. Parser, your partner, was doing all this without your knowing it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Mrs. Bull ask him not to speak of it? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What do you mean in this letter by saying that Mrs. Vaughan's coming would only bring her mother trouble and anxiety? A.—Mrs. Bull told me that she could not at that time endure her daughter's visit. She said that it would result in emotional excitement and physical injury.

Q.—Do you know that it was claimed in this case that Olea brought a malign influence when she came from West Lebanon that affected Mrs. Bull in mind and body? A.—I know you make that claim.

Q.—And you say Mrs. Bull told you that it would stir her up mentally and so physically if her daughter came? A.—Yes, she told me that herself.

Q.—Did she speak of her daughter with affection? A.—Yes, then and always.

Q.—Miss Noble and Mrs. Briggs were there with her? A.—Yes, occasionally.

Q.—But she could not stand to see her daughter? A.—No.

Q.—Did Mrs. Bull mention the Shapleighs in the conversation to which you refer in this letter? A.—No.

Q.—How long since you heard her mention them by name? A.—Many years.

Q.—Had she referred to them at all? A.—As Lebanon influences and surroundings. She may have used their names.

Q.—But she spoke of them as Lebanon influences, did she? A.—I shall have to retract that. I said that as a general term.

Q.—Well, how did she refer to them? A.—It was unnecessary to use names because I understood the situation.

No Telepathy There.

Q.—Do you mean that there was a sort of telepathic communication between you? A.—No. Mrs. Bull has accounted for Olea's actions by suggesting that she was influenced by Mrs. Shapleigh. She refers to them as the Lebanon household or something like that.

Q.—Did you know that she had refused to receive letters sent directly from West Lebanon to her by her daughter? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know that she had them sent in care of Mr. Bartlett? A.—No.

Q.—You say in this letter 'I know of no harmful influences such as those to which you refer when you say Mrs. Bull needed protection,' did you know what she was talking about? A.—No.

Q.—Did not you know that Olea thought Mrs. Bull was surrounded by people exerting a harmful influence on her? A.—No.

Q.—And did you think that this congregation of Swami and Mrs. Briggs and the Roses was entirely agreeable to her? A.—Yes, she always treated them courteously. She treated Miss Noble affectionately.

Q.—When? A.—When they met she would kiss her and call her Martha. They used to talk very intimately of Miss Noble's affairs.

Q.—Can you state at all specifically what you refer to? A.—Well, I should probably limit the word affection to the personal touch when they met or parted.

Q.—Was there any such affection with the Roses? A.—No; only interest and courtesy.

SHEA BOY, WHOSE TOES ARE SEWED ON BY GOLDEN THREADS

DENNIS SHEA JR.

Two toes on the left foot of four-year-old Dennis Shea, Jr., son of Dennis Shea of No. 10 Oak street, Hyde Park, are attached to the little chap's foot to-day only by sutures of golden thread. The little toe is gone, but the others will probably be saved to him by a remarkable experiment in surgery.

Dr. David E. Hanlon of the Linwood Street Hospital performed the operation after an accident. With several others he had been playing at West River and Maple streets and had run into an Old Colony street car. His foot slipped under a wheel.

"When the little fellow got here in an ambulance," said Dr. Hanlon, "the little toe was gone, but the other two hung on by a shred. I thought there was a possibility of saving them and I had an anaesthetic given to the boy as quickly as possible and put him on the operating table. Then I sewed the toes on with gold thread, taking every possible care to give them a chance to grow on again.

"Of course, I can't be certain of the success of the operation, but the little patient is resting well and I have every hope that he may go away with his foot almost intact. If the wound should not heal it would be necessary to amputate the forward part of the foot."

CURTIS'S CASE TO GO TO THE JURY

Judge Jenney, in the Suffolk Superior Court to-day, denied the petition of Harry F. Curtis, one of the four defendants in the Sederquist-Barry case, to have his case taken from the jury on the ground of insufficient evidence. The court ruled that the case against Curtis must now go to the jury for consideration of two counts, one alleging the theft of a certificate of five shares of common stock of the Southern Railway, valued at $130, and of one certificate of two shares of Steel preferred, valued at $110.

Final argument by counsel for the four defendants in the case against the four brokers began in the court to-day. Arthur B. Sederquist, John E. Barry and D. Eustis Bigelow, the other three defendants, are charged with larceny of stocks valued at $15,000, in fifty-five counts. The entire number of counts will go to the jury for consideration.

Thomas W. Proctor, counsel for Curtis, in making his argument, declared that the jury, to convict his client, must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that Curtis took the stocks and bonds with felonious intent to steal. He said the charge was a very grave one, and that there could be but one more serious for his client, and that would be a case in which his life might be the forfeit.

It is expected the case may get to the jury to-morrow afternoon or Monday morning, at the latest. This is the closing of the thirteenth week of the trial. The cost to the county is between $20,000 and $25,000.

Judge Jenney, it was understood to-day, will begin his charge to the jury to-morrow afternoon and would finish not later than Saturday morning. Judge Jenney said it was his desire to conclude the trial this week. For this reason he will hold court Saturday, so that it is probable the case will be finished day after to-morrow.

JEWISH FEAST ON TO-NIGHT

Beginning to-night Shebuoth, the "Feast of Weeks," will be observed by the Jewish congregations of Greater Boston for a period of two days. The synagogues will be decorated with flowers and passages from the Book of Ruth, symbolic of the pastoral idea, will be read. To-morrow confirmation exercises will be held for all the children who have been graduated from the religious schools. At Temple Israel on Commonwealth avenue about twenty boys and girls will be confirmed. Rabbi Schindler will conduct services at the Leopold Morse Home. At Temple Ohabei Shalom, in Union Park, nearly forty will take vows of the faith. Shebuoth is celebrated seven weeks after the beginning of Passover, and is associated by the Jews with the handing down of the Ten Commandments from Mt. Sinai.

SEEK $30,000 IN LOST WILL CASE

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 1.—Seeking to recover over $30,000 which was willed to philanthropic institutions by Sarah R. Spaulding of Lowell, but which was distributed among distant relatives when the will was lost, Administrator John F. Sawyer has brought action in the Hillsboro County Superior Court praying that the New Hampshire relatives who received a share be made to account for the same. Funds of the defendants in Manchester banks have been attached. The writ is returnable in September.

Mrs. Spaulding died in Lowell April 6, 1902. No will was found, and on May 27, 1902, C. H. Coburn was appointed administrator. He settled the estate and divided it equally among three cousins, the nearest relatives living. In February, while cleaning out a vault in the old Lowell National Bank, a will, signed by Mrs. Spaulding, was found. The cousins were not named in it.

CONCESSIONS AVERT STRIKE

Concessions on the part of employers in the building trades averted the general strike that was threatened by three unions unless their demands were granted to-day. The unions and their demands are as follows: Building Laborers, who asked 35 cents an hour on all construction work, the rate that had been paid to no other laborers than masons' tenders; Cement and Asphalt Workers, who demanded 60 cents an hour for mechanics and 45 cents an hour for helpers instead of the 50 cent and 38 cent scale that had previously been in force; and the Hoisting and Portable Engineers, who demanded $25 a week instead of $24, and a half holiday on Saturday. The 175 men of the engineers' union got their demands without difficulty. Fourteen of the twenty-one firms of employers agreed to the increase to the cement workers, and many of the employers conceded the demands of the building laborers. Some of the latter were out, but their leaders said late to-day that it was likely that almost every man would be back at his job in the morning.

A SQUARE-DEAL

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and these are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless—even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles in them, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or other organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

To find out more about the above mentioned diseases and all about the body in health and disease, get the Common Sense Medical Adviser—the People's Schoolmaster in Medicine—revised and up-to-date book of 1000 pages—which treats of diseased conditions and the practical, successful treatment thereof. GRETNA GREEN CAREER ENDED

NASHUA, N. H., June 1.—The career of Nashua as the Gretna Green of New England came to an end at midnight.

Couples in a hurry to be married can no longer come to Nashua as the most convenient point to Boston and other Massachusetts places to take advantage of the New Hampshire law which permitted marriages without previous notice and have the nuptial knot tied as soon as they give the required facts about themselves to the city clerk.

The new law goes into effect with the new month. It will, however, still be an easy matter for persons wishing to get married away from home quietly to come from Massachusetts and do it here.

A COUNTRY EDITOR REMINDS MR. TAFT OF CUB REPORTER DAYS

DETROIT, June 1.—President Taft has been invited to visit Ubly, Mich., by John Lusk, proprietor of the Ubly Courier. Mr. Lusk, in writing the President, pointed out that when Mr. Taft was a "cub reporter" on the Cincinnati Gazette at $12 a week, Lusk was getting $25 on the same newspaper. Lusk wasn't an editor then. He was "on the case." In the last issue of his paper Lusk says: "After all, we don't know whether Mr. Taft has much on us, if it wasn't for the rheumatism."

21 BATTLESHIPS OFF CAPE IN JULY

NEWPORT, R. I., June 1.—Plans are under way for the assembling off Cape Cod in July of the largest battleship fleet ever brought together under the American flag.

The fleet is to be composed of twenty-one battleships. In addition, the armored cruiser division, in charge of Rear Admiral Sidney A. Staunton, and consisting of the Tennessee, Montana, North Carolina and Washington, now at Guantanamo, will be attached to the fleet as a fifth division. The Atlantic torpedo fleet, in command of Commander Edward W. Eberle, consisting of sixteen or seventeen destroyers and seven submarines, will be added, bringing the number of fighting craft in the fleet to more than fifty.

LEGISLATORS TO PLAY BASEBALL

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Democrats and Republicans of the House are going to settle the question of superiority in baseball some time this month by a game of the great national pastime. Representative Webb of North Carolina will manage the Democratic team while Nicholas Longworth of Ohio will take the Republicans under his care. He will have as his captain and assistant Representative Burke of Pennsylvania. The proceeds of the game will be turned over to the Playgrounds Association of Washington.

$45,000 BLAZE AT GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, June 1.—Damage estimated at $45,000 was caused to property along the water front early to-day by a fire which threatened a large part of the city's wharf property and gave the firemen a long battle. A general alarm was rung in.

Two explosions of fifty barrels of refining oil spread the flames to several vessels lying at the wharf at the foot of Duncan street.

Several families living near the fire deserted their homes, taking their clothing and valuables, and were sheltered at police headquarters until the fire was under control.

The Gloucester Gaslight Company's property and several other wooden buildings in the vicinity were destroyed.

Charles Christian, an employe of the gaslight company, discovered the fire in a carpenter shop on the Charles Parkhurst estate. Within ten minutes the flames spread through the three buildings, one being a new one, on what was the Gloucester Steamboat Company property. Within a short time 1,100 tons of coke and 1,200 tons of soft coal were being destroyed, and then followed the two explosions of barrels of refining oil, which caused the spectators to stampede from the wharf.

The explosion spread the flames to many surrounding buildings, but the rain prevented a more severe fire. The building of the A. W. Dodd Oil and Glue Company, fifty feet away, took fire, but was saved before very serious damage was done.

The house boat Clarina on the Parkhurst marine railway took fire and was damaged considerably. Patrolman Frank Parsons saved a sloop yacht by warping her out into the stream away from the burning pier.

Father of Gov. Foss, 81 To-day

FATHER OF GOVERNOR FOSS HALE AND HEARTY ON HIS 81ST BIRTHDAY.

Father of two prominent politicians, and still as erect and vigorous in appearance as either of them, George Edmond Foss, father of the Governor, is to-day celebrating his eighty-first birthday in his home at No. 8 Everett street, Jamaica Plain. Mr and Mrs. Foss are spending the day at home. The Governor and his family will take dinner with them, and they expect many of their friends to drop in informally during the day. Mrs. Foss hopes that perhaps her son George, who is now in Washington as member of Congress from Illinois, will surprise them before the day is over.

Mr. Foss, a tall powerfully built man with splendid carriage and beautiful white hair, looked almost as young as his charming wife, this morning, as he stood in his drawing room receiving the congratulations of friends. He laughed when he was asked how he happened to have such a political family.

Two Sons in Politics.

"No, it was not due to my influence directly," said Mr. Foss, "that they went into politics. George, the one who is in Washington, studied law after he graduated from Harvard, and practiced for some years. It is always an easy transition from law to politics. But Eugene was always a business man, just as he is making a business Governor, and it was his interest in the problems which confront the country, and his desire to take an active part in meeting them, which drew him into politics."

Mr. and Mrs. Foss, although they made their first home after their marriage in St. Albans, Vermont, only lived there until their sons were grown and then moved to Chicago where they lived until seven years ago.

Wants to See Mrs. Pomeroy.

"The boys are New Englanders, however," said Mr. Foss, "because they were born and brought up in Vermont and went to school there until they went to Harvard. And Eugene has never left New England, for as soon as he was through he settled in Boston and made his home here, and has been here ever since. We found the West very attractive, but Boston is a very good place to come back to."

Mr. and Mrs. Foss plan to spend some time with the Governor in his Summer home at Cohasset, but further than this they have made no plans for the Summer.

"We just take every day as it comes," said Mrs. Foss with a cherry smile, "and don't try to make plans a whole season ahead as we used to when we were younger. We have learned to realize that plans very often fail to go through in their original form. But something else happens, which is just as pleasant."

Mrs. Foss also spoke of the Pomeroy case, and of her interest in Mrs. Pomeroy. "My son told me of his interview with Mrs. Pomeroy," she said "and of the unusual interest he took in her. He said tha she was a remarkable woman, and that she pleaded her son's cause with such simple eloquence, that it made me want to meet the dear old lady herself."

LADIES' KENNEL CLUB SHOW ON

The dog show of the Ladies' Kennel Club of Massachusetts was opened to-day at the Chestnut Hill Country Club and attracted many from Boston, New York and various parts of New England.

The club, composed of some of the most prominent women in the State, has been working harder than usual this year to make this show one of the best ever held. The proceeds go to give sick children and poor families a week in the country.

From a dog show standpoint it brought together many of the best dogs in the land. Over one thousand entries were in the lists and 650 dogs were shown, including every breed.

Much interest centres around two women who judged the biggest classes in the show. Miss Vernona Jarbeau, the famous New York actress, judged French bulldogs, and Mrs. Edward W. Clark, who has a large kennel of spaniels at Egypt, judged the various spaniel classes and some of the toy classes.

Many from New York and Philadelphia motored over for the day's show and luncheon was served at the clubhouse at noon.

Mrs. E. H. Seagraves, president of the club, was early on hand with a number of women assistants, looking after the details of the show with Superintendent Thomas Kemp.

Many women showed blue ribbon dogs in competition with some of the leading kennels of the country. Among those that were prominent in the winnings were Mrs. Arnold Lawson, Miss Mary Winthrop, Mrs. Thomas Kemp, Mrs. C. H. Tyler and Mrs. A. Henry Higginson.

$28,000,000 STATION OPENED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 1.—The new $28,000,000 passenger station of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad was opened for inspection to-day and will be ready for the formal opening to passengers Sunday. The station is a four-story structure of granite. Instead of the old-fashioned arched trainshed a new type, known as the "umbrella," which permits smoke from the engines to escape into the air, has been installed. The station is the finest and most modern in the West.

CARNEGIE SAYS HE IS IN DARK

LONDON, June 1.—Andrew Carnegie, at his hotel here to-day, declared he knows nothing of questionable transactions revealed by John W. Gates at the inquiry into the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company b ythe Steel Trust.

"I am on vacation, and I won't say anything about business until I am at home again. Then they can ask me all the questions they want to, and I shall answer them," the ironmaster declared.

"I don't care what has been said, and I don't see why I should notice anything Mr. Gates says," was his reply to queries as to John W. Gates's statement that Carnegie had sold to the Steel Trust for $320,000,000 the very same property that he had been willing to sell the previous year for just half that amount, and that the trust had been forced to pay the price because it found Carnegie incapable to keep a gentleman's agreement not to cut prices.

When the charge was repeated to him that George W. Perkins, partner of J. Pierpont Morgan, had precipitated the sale of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company by starting a run on the Trust Company of America, Mr. Carnegie got emphatic.

"I have been out of business for eleven years," he insisted. "I haven't even thought of it, and consequently I could have had nothing to do with any so-called Roosevelt panic. I know nothing of all these dirty scandals.

"But Perkins is one of the best men in the world. If you knew him well you'd know he is incapable of anything that isn't right. He is a member of my Peace Board."

Mr. Carnegie also stated forcibly that he did not believe it lay in Morgan to take steps to cause a panic by directing Valentine P. Snyder of the National Bank of Commerce to refuse to clear the Knickerbocker Trust Company's checks at his bank.

Mr. Snow receives the $100 offered for the Successful Title

This terminates one of the most popular and most-talked-of contests ever inaugurated in New England. Approximately one hundred thousand titles were suggested. The greater number of names submitted were found to be in use and there were very few indeed which were not suggested many times by different individuals.

We were naturally a little curious to know how Mr. Snow conceived the name of the Merchants Limited and therefore sent one of the judges out to interview him.

Mr. Snow informed him that he got the name from the 5 o'clock limited train which leaves the South Station every afternoon for New York. The 5 o'clock Merchants Limited is patronized almost exclusively by business men. It makes the best time between Boston and New York, furnishes the greatest comfort, ease and satisfaction to the traveller, and does, in fact, represent modern perfection in train service.

Therefore, quite appropriately, Mr. Snow considered it a good name for the "nameless."

The Merchants Limited was by no means the first choice of the judges. Several other names were considered far more appropriate and would have been selected, but were found already to be in use.

We have gone to a great deal of trouble to arrange for our supplies of the Merchants Limited. We have taken pains to select a popular and appropriate name for it all because we know we have got an unusual cigar value for the smoker.

Never before has a cigar of its equal sold for less than 10c. It is Havana filled, Sumatra wrapped, full Londres size.

STRIKING DEVELOPMENTS IN NEW YORK BATHTUB MYSTERY, TOLD IN PICTURES

Although Scheib had removed from the scene of the tragedy, he says he continued to pay rent in the hope that his wife would return.

Following the discovery of the tragedy, the chauffeur is detained as a material witness and is locked up in the Tombs without bail.

At a preliminary examination before Coroner Hellenstein he appears to be extremely nervous and refuses to aid the detectives in their inquiry.

Subjected to a gruelling third degree at Police Headquarters, he admits that he wrote the love letter signed "Anna" to make his wife jealous.

Doubting the chauffeur's statement that his wife was an orphan, detectives visit neighbors in an attempt to learn something of the bathtub victim.

funeral. He even went so far as to give me a description of how the little girls of the parish, all dressed in white and carrying flowers walked in front of the coffin up the aisle of the church. Then he told me how every one went out to the grave and how he cried over her coffin until they had to take him away.

"I pitied him so much that I gave him my address and asked him to call and see me. I didn't see any harm in it, now that his wife was dead. But he never came, and I have never seen him from that day to this. It is all very terrible, and I am so sorry for Lillian, as she was a very sweet girl and I was very fond of her."

A psychologist might find much food for thought in Miss Blake's statement that Scheib described to her the swollen features of his wife, and his remark that she "looked very ugly in death." A truer description of the appearance Mrs. Scheib's features presented as she lay in the bathtub could not be written.

Mr. O'Grady's description of his daughter, in weight and stature, corresponds exactly with the description of Mrs. Scheib and of the bathtub victim, and his description of Hugh Allerton Sherman is an excellent pen portrait of Harry A. Scheib.

Women Not Friends.

In letters from Mr. O'Grady to his daughter, which were found in the flat, there are references by him to her having left her home and to her disagreement with her stepmother. There seems to be no question that Mrs. Scheib and Mrs. O'Grady did not get along well, but the father was devoted to his daughter, and the tone of his letters to her show this. They are full of little family details, the trifles that are of interest to one away from home. One of the letters, dated from No. 37 Thomas street, Springfield, on August 10, 1910, and addressed to his daughter at Amityville, reads:

> You have no doubt received the letter which I mailed to you the day before I got yours. I cannot write a very long letter now as my time is very largely taken up with the care of Eileen, who is suffering a very bad case of sore eyes, conjunctivitis, resulting from measles and whooping cough.
>
> Dr. Lynch sent to an oculist and they fear that it will be necessary to send her to the hospital. The upper eyelids are tremendously swollen, full of abscess. The eye looks like a huge angry boil. For the foregoing reasons you will easily believe I did not take much interest in the family gossip.
>
> Not one of my ever affectionate relatives has been to my house during all the time of Eileen's illness. Of course I don't know anything of Etta's plans. She is keeping company with a man named Fitzgerald, a ticket agent at Willimansett depot. Thomas and Miss Tehoe are still keping company, and I suppose they will be married some time if they live long enough.
>
> Miss Tehoe and her younger brother and sister have left their parents' home and are rooming out altogether with a Mrs. Mulvey. No relative, I have had to call there. Tom loaned his typewriting machine to Miss Tehoe's sister and I had to go there for it. I am not doing anything as yet and I do not suppose I shall until Eileen is better.

Sends Love to Hugh.

> Now, my dear Lillian, I must say goodby, as it is time for me to go over and see D. Lynch and find out whether he thinks an operation will be necessary. By the way, that lawyer brother of the doctor's who was struck by the street car in New York last Christmas is likely to be mentally incompetent during the rest of his life.
>
> Now goodby and God bless you.
>
> Love to Hugh. FATHER.

Other letters tell her to write to him at Chicopee, not to the home address, as "Mrs. O'Grady, like a good true wife, is careful to open and read all my mail." But there is nothing in any of the letters, the last of which was written toward the end of October, to cast any light on a motive for the killing of Mrs. Scheib.

Scheib's Own Story.

"Now, I want you to know that I did not murder my wife," he said. "I had nothing to do with it."

Then, in clear, even tone, Scheib began his narrative.

"All I know," the prisoner said, "is that my wife and I occasionally had differences. She was inclined to be jealous.

"We got along all right until about February 2—it was the morning of that day that I left. When I returned she was gone. I found her key and a little note on the dresser, telling me she was going and would not come back."

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty interrupted Scheib at this point like a flash.

"That is your wife's body, isn't it?"

Scheib nodded.

"Then how did she get back into the flat if she gave up the key?"

Scheib remained silent for an instant and then said: "She could have gotten a pass key from the agents."

As a matter of fact the agents have reported to the police that they did not see the woman after early in January.

"Who is Anna?" asked Dougherty. Scheib stirred uneasily.

"Now, I might as well tell the truth. There isn't any 'Anna.' I wrote that 'Anna' letter to make my wife believe that she was not the only woman in the world. You see, I was going to leave it around the flat and when she came back she would find it."

Inspector Russell took up the questioning at this point.

"Suppose you give us a copy of it," the inspector said.

Wrote the Anna Love Letter.

Scheib nodded cheerfully, and, as the inspector dictated the gushing letter the man wrote rapidly. When he had finished there was no doubt Scheib had told the truth about the "Anna" love note.

Scheib said he had continued to live in the flat till April 15, when he engaged a room in Amsterdam avenue from a man named Miner. Incidentally Miner told the police that the man took the room early in March. Sheib said he returned to the flat April 25 or 26 and had spent the night there. If he did, Dr. Lehane is positive Scheib must have detected the presence of the body. Agents of the building, whose offices are on the same floor as the Scheib flat declare he never appeared there in person.

The police case may be summed up as follows:

Professor Larkin of Columbia University is hurrying the analysis of the contents of the bath tub. It is thought the tub may have contained some acid solution. Coroners Physician Lehane's autopsy has progressed far enough for him to tell the police that a charge of murder may be made. On what this is based is not revealed.

Mrs. Scheib was last seen alive around January 12 to 16. The exact date is not settled. About the night of January 14 Scheib went to Kimball's drug store, Avenue A and Eighty-seventh street, where he and his wife had traded, and announced that he was a bachelor, as his wife had gone on a visit to her people in Springfield.

SCHEIB KNOWN IN SPRINGFIELD AS H. A. SHERMAN

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 1.—Henry A. Scheib, held in New York in connection with the mysterious death of his wife, was known here as Hugh Allerton Sherman. His wife was Elizabeth O'Grady, daughter of Connor O'Grady and step-daughter of Mrs. O'Grady, his second wife, who now lives here at No. 37 Thomas street.

Sherman, it is declared, is wanted in Springfield on larceny charges. The couple are reported to have been married in New York, where the girl went seeking work and where she met Scheib.

Mr. O'Grady has had no tidings from his daughter for several months, but he did not connect this fact with the New York murder mystery until seen by the police to-night. Mr. O'Grady is nearly prostrated. He says that his daughter is twenty-five years old. Her mother died when she was young and she was educated in the Holy Name school, Chicopee.

About six years ago she went to New York to work. She met Hugh Allerton Sherman, a chauffeur, and announced to her father her intention to marry him. O'Grady opposed the match, he says, but on no stronger grounds than the fact that he had not seen his future son-in-law.

Visited in Springfield.

They were married in the Church of St. Francis Xavier in the Summer of 1907. They visited O'Grady soon after their marriage and again in the Summer of 1908. On the later occasion Sherman spent several weeks in Springfield and at one time thought of taking up his residence here. O'Grady has not seen his daughter since her return to New York three years ago.

O'Grady says that his daughter was of slender build, not over 5 feet in height and weighing from 105 to 110 pounds. Sherman, he says, was 5 feet 3 or 4 inches in height, stockily built and weighed 140 pounds or more. He is light complexioned and has blue eyes.

O'Grady says he knows nothing of the antecedents of his son-in-law, whose home he understands is in Chicago. O'Grady last heard from his daughter in November, 1910. She wrote that she was about to move to the West Side and gave her new address as No. 148 West Thirty-seventh street.

She referred affectionately to her husband as "Hughey." She had just bought a fur coat for Hughey, she said, expected a gift of one from the "boss." O'Grady was somewhat surprised not to receive his usual Christmas letter from his daughter. His uneasiness increased at the return of a Christmas package by the New York post office and subsequently of letters which he wrote inquiring solicitously as to his daughter's welfare.

The matter had been in his mind so constantly that last night he found himself unable to sleep. At that time, however, he was not even aware of the murder.

Letters Signed Father.

O'Grady says in writing to his daughter his signature was invariably "Father." The finding of letters signed in this manner he considers irrefutable evidence of identity. O'Grady says that his son-in-law always referred to his daughter as "My little girl." This is the expression which Scheib is reported to have used after his arrest.

O'Grady says that his daughter and son-in-law lived in Amityville, L. I., last Summer, moving into town in the Fall. After the letters he wrote to his daughter were returned O'Grady consulted a Inspector St. Leger stated that he was positive that the Charles F. Sherman arrested in this city in 1907 was the husband of Connor O'Grady's daughter. When arrested here Sherman gave his occupation as that of a sign painter and showed business cards with his name and address. New York directory, but it did not contain his son-in-law's name. O'Grady will probably go to New York to-morrow to assist in the identification of the woman's body, and also to see if he recognizes Scheib.

According to the local police records a Charles F. Sherman was arrested in this city November 30, 1907, on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $25 from M. G. Kinsley & Co. at No. 121 Main street.

It is alleged that Sherman ordered a suit for his wife, and in payment gave a check on the Union Trust Company of this city for $25, which was found to be worthless. He was released on $100 bail, furnished by a local Jewish resident. When his case came to trial he did not appear. The local police allege that Sherman is wanted in other cities on larceny charges.

LANGFORD QUITS TALK OF A JOHNSON MATCH

By ED W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, June 1.—What has become of the Langford challenge to Jack Johnson?

Joe Woodman, manager of the sawed-off Langford, was in the city, off and on, for forty-eight hours or more and didn't peep once about his man heaving just one more challenge at the champion.

There's a reason for this. Johnson has tired the Langford party out.

Even the persistency with which Woodman started after the champion in an attempt to force him into a scrap, starting soon after the Reno affair of last July, bore no fruit. Only an occasional "rise" was obtained out of Johnson and when Woodman attempted to force the issue the Johnson person froze up tighter than the polar regions and didn't even deign to reply to any of the Woodman's peppery remarks.

Langford Still Anxious.

Langford still is anxious to get a crack at the champion and his title, but he is tired of seeing his manager wasting his gray matter devising new schemes of breaking into print with challenges. Hence the present silence of the squatty one.

"That decision in Paris in the Sam McVey battle was particularly unfortunate for us because it gave Johnson a chance to crawl away again and hide behind McVey," Woodman said in discussing the situation among the heavyweights. "He can say now that Sam didn't even have the shade on McVey in a twenty-round encounter and would insist that Sam dispose of McVey before pestering him any further.

Says Corri Made Mistake.

"Eugene Corri, the English gentleman who was referee of the Paris battle, is a fine man, thoroughly honest and all that, but he certainly made a mistake in this instance in calling the thing a draw.

"Also, please let it be known that I never have said anything disparaging about Mr. Corri excepting what I have told you. He made a mistake and I never will think it was anything else. The crowd thought so, too, although some of the London correspondents who made the trip to Paris to see the battle sided with Mr. Corri and pointed out ways of justifying his verdict.

"One point that struck me as being peculiar. Twice during the contest McVey wanted to quit; said his hand was hurt or gave some other excuse for wanting to chuck it up. Corri happened on both occasions to be standing near McVey's corner and distinctly heard Hugh McIntosh tell McVey that if he didn't continue the contest he wouldn't give him a penny for his services.

Claims Shade from Sam.

"My contention is that such things should be taken into consideration by a referee when giving his decision. Sam certainly had a good shade, being the aggressor all the way through, and landing the harder punches and doing the more effective work at all times. Hadn't it been for Sam's forceful work there would not have been any fighting at all. So, all things considered, I am at a loss to see how Mr. Corri justified the decision.

Mr. Corri, in the meantime, comes back at Woodman in a letter to his American friend, John Krone of this city. He makes the statement that had the battle been decided in London the men would have been hissed off the stage and that he would have called it no contest inside of six or eight rounds, so indifferent was the work on both sides.

Spectators Were Satisfied.

But he made allowances for the temper of the French crowd that day. He saw that the spectators were taking the fight all right, because of their inexperience at the game, therefore permitted it to proceed. It was a bad contest, he avers. Langford, for some unknown reason, fighting far below his real form, while McVey rolled up a lead on points with a long, snappy left that he used to good advantage, especially in the early stages.

It looks like one of those endless arguments that never will be settled.

NELSON LOSES TO TOM HOWELL

By JIM KENNEDY.

Fighting Dick Nelson, who came over from Brooklyn to take away a little laurel from Beantown, is to-day nursing a battered left cauliflower ear and a very sore jaw. In addition he has a tremendous grouch because Tommy Howell of Philadelphia got a decision over him in a twelve-round bout at the Armory last night. Nelson is lucky he stayed twelve rounds.

After being jolted by a wicked left arm jab the point of his jaw came in contact with a terrific right swing that sent him crashing to the mat. The back of his head bounded on the floor with a resounding whack that did as much damage as the wallop.

The bell saved him from a knockout then and there and for the next three rounds he fought dazed. After that, however, Dick came back in good style and gave Tommy all he wanted for the remainder of the bout.

Howell fought cautiously. He kept away from Nelson, and when obliged to get in at close range clinched and covered up. His left jab kept poking Nelson in the face and his right wallop, which he repeatedly tried to land after, was chopped into ineffectiveness by the Brooklyn boy.

Nelson the Agressor.

If it hadn't been for that second round, Nelson would easily have beaten the Philadelphian. That punch took the steam out of Nelson for the first half of the fight, and it was too late to win when he started to force the going. In all the rounds Nelson was the aggressor. Howell danced about the ring and the only lively mixing was when he had to fight his way out of a corner. At the end Nelson had recovered and Howell was hanging on.

Billy Nixon of Cambridge, who is touted as a young man with a wallop, proved that he was there with the punch in a scheduled twelve-round bout with a husky Chicago fighter named Frank Carsey. Carsey withstood a couple of stiff body punches in the first round, one of which lifted him off his feet. In the second round he started to mix things up. That was his mistake. A left and a right put him to the mat where he lay until counted out. He was several minutes, apparently, in recovering, but some at the ring side thought he was bluffing.

After Napoleon Dufresne of Lewiston threw his shoulder out he hung his head on the ropes and wept. It was in the third round when Dufresne cried quits. He had easily out-pointed and hit harder than Irish Paddy Callahan of New York during the fight which was scheduled for eight rounds.

Decision to Callahan.

In some manner his left shoulder was disabled and he suffered great pain. He was willing to continue the fight after the shoulder was pulled back again, but Referee Flaherty had awarded the decision to Callahan.

Dufresne made a very favorable impression and he will probably be billed to box here again. He is an aggressive fighter with a stiff punch and plenty of science.

Joe Blum of Philadelphia and Benny Stone of Boston mixed it in good shape for six rounds, the decision properly going to the visitor.

All in all the show was one of the best given at the Armory recently. While no program was announced for next Tuesday night it is probable that some of the same men will be given another opportunity to show before a Boston audience.

CYCLONE BURNS AND WILLOUGHBY MEET

A wrestling match which bids fair to excite more widespread interest even than the Willoughby-Anderson bout of last week is scheduled for the Columbia Theatre tomorrow night, when Cyclone Burns, the great Boston light heavyweight, will endeavor to give Walter Willoughby a dose of the same bitter medicine the latter handed out to Sam Anderson a week ago. The Cyclone is in rare form right now, as is attested by his magnificent work in the hour-and-a-quarter draw with Landin a week ago, while those who saw Willoughby in action last Friday night know that he is fit to battle for his life. These men met on the Columbia mat a year ago and went three hours to a draw. There will be two fast preliminaries that will be on a par with the sensational bouts of last week.

The second four will row as follows: Four, Howe; 3, Ives; 2, Buckingham; 1, Elwell; coxswain, Barnum.

KISTLER TO COACH YALE FRESHMEN

NEW HAVEN, June 1.—Arthur Howe, Yale football captain, announces the appointment of Eric O. Kistler, 1911, S., of Denver, Col., as coach of the Yale freshman football squad for next Fall. This is a radical departure from the former system of freshman football coaching, in which the squad was directed by an undergraduate player chosen from the varsity squad.

NORFOLK A. A. KEEPS RIGHT ON WINNING

The Norfolk A. A., a fast amateur team of Dorchester, defeated the St. Pauls of the Traveler League by the score of 9 to 0. For games wanted write to George E. Harford, No. 86 Whitfield street, Dorchester.

HIGH SCHOOL LEAGUE GAMES

Saturday's games in the Suburban League will have much to do with final standing. The Melrose and Medford High nines will come together at Medford, while Malden will endeavor to take a fall out of the Somerville team at Broadway Field, Somerville. Should Melrose win over Medford, and Somerville over Malden, it will mean a triple tie in the league with six games won and three lost each. As the league now stands Medford leads with six games won and two defeats, one by Malden and one by Somerville, the latter game being lost Memorial Day.

On the other hand if Medford should win it will give them a stronger hold on the top rung of the ladder, while if Somerville should win over Malden it would put them in second place with Melrose trailing.

Melrose High has yet to beat the Medford boys and this game should attract a good crowd. It will bring together a great pitching dual, Cram, the veteran Melrose star, opposing Joe Fahey, the idol of the Medford fans.

In the last meeting of these two star twirlers, which was a week ago Saturday, Cram was hit hard, being touched up for nine hits, while Fahey allowed only two. The Melrose fans say that Rube was overworked and will be able to show his worth against the Medford team when they meet Saturday.

The Somerville team although greatly weakened by the loss of Bob Garland, who sprained a tendon in his leg in the Brockton game, is greatly strengthened by the finding of the new pitching sensation in the school in person of Walter Whittaker. Whittaker has worked in three league games and won all of them. He has victories over Melrose, Medford and Rindge.

The Malden team is not at all discouraged over the loss to Everett on Memorial Day, saying that it was a lucky chance and are out to give the Somerville boys a drubbing. Up to date Somerville has two victories over Malden. Queen and Murphy will probably work for Malden with Walter Whittaker and Knox doing the battery stunt for Somerville.

WOODBURN FARM IS HOME OF FAST HORSES

At Woodburn Farm were owned at one time or another, the great sires, Pilot, Jr., Abdallah 15, Harold, Edwin Forest 19, Woodford Mambrino, Bay Chief, and last, but not least, the immortal Lexington, whose blood, as well as that of his sire, Boston, blends so kindly with that of the trotter.

It was on the Woodburn Farm that Maud S., the peerless daughter of Harold and Miss Russell, first saw the light. It was on Woodburn Farm that Lord Russell, full brother of Maud S., was born, and also his son, Kremlin, 2:07¾, sire of Kushan. The mother of 2:10 trotters—Miss Russell—was foaled at Woodburn.

YALE MAN WANTS WORLD'S TITLE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 1.—Yale will have a representative in the all-round national championship this year. J. R. Kilpatrick, captain of the track team at Yale, and star end of the football eleven, has decided to compete in this event at the championship meet which will be held in Chicago in June.

Kilpatrick is a great all-around athlete. He has great ability with the weights, is a good jumper and hurdler. He is also a fast sprinter and can run and walk a mile in fairly fast time.

He is a big, powerfully built fellow weighing nearly 200 pounds, but despite his weight is as agile as a cat. He has begun systematic training for this event and Johnny Mack, his trainer, believes he will be in good condition on the day of the meet to carry off stellar honors.

For Yale to win this important event Kilpatrick must be at his best and show form he has lacked in previous meets. Opposing him in that competition will be the greatest athletes in the country. Martin Sheridan, the record holder of this event, has signified his intention of making the trip.

He says he will begin light training for it early next month. Others who are likely to compete in this event are Garrells, the Chicago champion; F. C. Thomson, of Los Angeles, who won the event last year, and John Bredemus of Princeton, winner of the title in 1909.

GREAT CROWD TO SEE RIVAL SOX BATTLE

fans will have plenty to amuse and entertain them. The Huntington avenue engagement which begins to-day was last until the seventeenth and will include [illegible] the Sox and each of the Western clubs.

[illegible] White Sox are first in order and [illegible] Monday. They will be followed by [illegible] St. Louis Browns [illegible] games slated. Then will [illegible] terrible Tigers and [illegible] Naps, who are being run by Captain George Stovall.

[illegible] its chances of [illegible] higher depend not only on its own work, but also on the accomplishments of the Athletics and Tigers. The Sox can't climb to the top of the ladder as long as Philadelphia and Detroit keep on winning, but they can hold their ground. In fact, they must, for the Chicago Sox and the Yankees are looking on their present position with covetous eyes.

Walsh, White, Lange and Scott are the Chicago pitchers the Sox will probably be asked to beat. None of them can be classed as exactly easy. There are also Young and Olmstead in Duffy's corps who are likely to give anybody a battle.

Manager Hugh is switching his men around considerably. Pat Dougherty, our old friend, usually gets into the lineup against right-handed pitchers and James J. Callahan, the champion of the American League come-backs, alternates with Pat. Both of them would perform regularly but for the presence of the Pacific Coast wonder Ping Bodie, who is playing centre field and smashing fences. Matty McIntyre is the steady in right.

Harry Lord, who has friends by the hundred in Boston, is playing sweet ball at third and hitting hard. Corhan, the Western League recruit, does most of the shortstopping. Lee Ford Tannehill, who has forgotten more about infielding than most [illegible] know, is at second base, and John Collins of Newton has evidently shaken off all contenders for the remaining berth.

Doc White, whose professions include dentistry, pitching, composing, vocalizing and journalism, has just turned out another song, a baseball affair called "Gee, It's a Wonderful Game." He brought along a few copies of it and worded it with Ed Walsh at the Copley Square last night to the delight of the guests. The performance [illegible] that Doc can do something besides pitch, even if he is left [illegible].

With the Chicagoans on this trip are [illegible] the eminent baseball writer, Sam Weller, Crusinberry, Irving Vaughn, Jr., and George Robbins, the man of mystery.

Those of the Red Sox who wanted to see what manner of team was representing Boston in the National League were disappointed when yesterday's rain stopped the proceedings at the South End grounds. Joe Wood, Eddie Karger, Duffy Lewis and others visited the Rustlers' yard and [illegible] with the Tesreauites and Phillies.

Manager Dooin of the Philadelphia club [illegible] team to the world's championship series.

"You don't really expect to win the pennant, do you?" asked one of the Sox.

"We've got just as good a chance as you have," replied Red.

PRINCETON TEAM IS UNDERGOING CHANGES

PRINCETON, N. J., June 1.—The crushing defeat of the Princeton team at the hands of Penn Saturday is considered merely an incident in the affairs of the team, and yet it is realized that improvement must be made for Yale. Another [illegible] first base, the fifth of the season, is expected. Lackey, catcher, has such a [illegible] that Sterret may have to catch and the Nassau team be invaded for the first time this season for a first sacker, in Hughes, captain of the basketball team.

JONES WILL NOT RUN UNTIL NEXT SUMMER

Jack Moakley, the Cornell trainer, who was responsible more than anyone else for Jones's mile record of 4.15 2-5 at the Stadium, states that if he has his way Jones will do little running the coming athletic season. Moakley's motto is wait for the next college season. The Cornell champion will be sorely missed in some of the big [illegible] games this Summer, but Moakley has the right idea after all.

WEST MEDFORD BOY IS PRINCETON CAPTAIN

PRINCETON, N. J., June 1.—Howard M. Sayre of West Medford, Mass., has been elected captain of the Princeton track team for 1912.

BRAINS NEEDED FOR FAST BALL

"The term rebuild holds more magic to the fan than any other word in baseball, but it will soon wear out," remarked Patsy Donovan. "When a club announces that it will rebuild the fans have visions of the pennant.

"Two clubs in the last ten years were rebuilt and made winners. The [illegible] pennant in 1904-05 and in 1908 won the National League pennant. Connie Mack rebuilt the Athletics in two years and won the world's championship. Almost every other big league club has rebuilt, some on a larger scale than others, and only a few have come through with first division teams."

Nap fans were [illegible] when the owners announced the team would be rebuilt. They expected a pennant winner right off the reel. A better team has been given the fans, but the pennant is a long way off.

The Brooklyn owners were just as unsuccessful in rebuilding their team as Mack was successful in rebuilding the Athletics. Brooklyn has been rebuilding five years and is in last place, and without hope of getting out of the second division. Roger Bresnahan was purchased of the Giants to rebuild the Cardinals.

Intelligence is needed to make a winner. The Naps will come up if the youngsters prove good thinkers. The Cubs had Evers, Tinker, Chance and King. Mack picked up Collins, Barry and McInnes, brainy players.

DUFFY IS HAPPY OVER HIS TEAM

Manager Hughey Duffy of the Chicago White Sox, who is here with [illegible] to-day, says that he has got together a [illegible] ball club [illegible] better than even on the first [illegible] the Eastern circuit, which opened in Boston to-day.

"I'm not fearful [illegible] this trip [illegible]," said the leader of the Chicago crew. "And [illegible] why. Last year when the Sox were on the road the team was composed of [illegible] young stars. They [illegible] played together [illegible] York [illegible] kind that was [illegible] games was [illegible]. The youngsters were nervous. It was [illegible] first campaign for the majority of them and consequently they were in [illegible] to play [illegible].

Recruits Are Settled Now.

"This year it is different. Collins last year was a recruit. This year he has had the benefit of [illegible] with [illegible] club and I think will play as well on the road as he does at home [illegible] much better [illegible] did last year when [illegible].

"If Zeider [illegible] will have had the benefit of making the [illegible] around the [illegible] circuit [illegible] start, but [illegible] But I've [illegible] a bunch of youngsters who [illegible] be one of the [illegible] two we will [illegible] year [illegible] as well [illegible] He [illegible] experienced and [illegible] player [illegible] at third will steady Corhan.

Bodie a Nervy Player.

"In the outfield we will have veterans in every position except center. Neither Dougherty nor Callahan is likely to become affected by the adverse comment of the foreign fans. Bodie, although [illegible] is one of those aggressive players who [illegible] it is difficult to worry. McIntyre has been at the fast game so long that he will play just as well on the road as he does on the South Side grounds.

"The one batter [illegible] Sullivan and Payne are seasoned. There is no reason why the catchers should not perform just as well on the grounds of the enemy as they do on the South Side of Chicago. Our pitchers have had the benefit of a year in the league. That is, the young fellows on the staff.

Lange Should Steady Down.

"Walsh and White, of course, are acclimated. Lange was a recruit last year. His swing [illegible] the circuit [illegible] [illegible] will be [illegible].

"[illegible] very well [illegible] I look [illegible] the Sox [illegible] best of [illegible] traveling [illegible] this season [illegible] that [illegible] only in spots [illegible] was composed of [illegible] who were making their first [illegible].

"More than this the team is [illegible] to round into form and [illegible] [illegible] South Side will be more [illegible]."

A LONG CLOUT

[illegible] Magee made a home run [illegible] and the ball traveled [illegible] stroke the ground [illegible] and sixty-eight feet is something of a clout. It is nearly twice as long as from home plate to the left field fence at the South End Grounds in Boston.

Abijah's Gold Reserve

A Story That Proves What Confidence Can Do in Time of Stress and Panic

By KENNETT HARRIS

ONCE there was [illegible] named Abijah who [illegible] gal, not to say parsimonious [illegible]. His habitat was where the [illegible] wave to the [illegible] breezes [illegible] believed in the gold standard [illegible] keeping th[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] drove to the post [illegible] where [illegible] confidential typewritten [illegible] consideration [illegible] stranger submitting a [illegible] of a highly profitable proposition whose details the writer could [illegible] the course of a personal interview.

Two days later Abijah [illegible] the depot platform with a suitcase of wood fibre by his side and a ticket to the big city in his pocket. His pocket also contained a wallet and the wallet was plethoric with $8 in ones and twos. The bulge beneath his undershirt was not noticeable.

As the train pulled out of the depot, Jas. Hood the liveryman, gave Abijah a parting word of caution and advice. "Hang on to your weasel, 'Bije,' he called, "and don't let them con men get you."

"Don't you never worry about me, Jas.," replied Abijah.

I won't, Jas. assured him. Nor did he. Nobody did. In a discussion of the subject, at the drug store, that evening, profound sympathy was expressed for any con man who might happen to get hold of Bije.

In three days Abijah returned and his wallet was still in his pocket and contained a two and two ones. He had besides, sixty five cents in a tobacco sack and the suitcase, of which he seemed especially careful.

It Came Abijah's Way

"How'd that there business of yours come out?" inquired Jas., who was meeting the train.

The incision that served Abijah for a mouth widened into a grin.

"It come out my way," he said.

"I hope you didn't take advantage of no one?"

Abijah's mouth closed, but the wrinkles around his eyes deepened [illegible] with a suppressed chuckle. It was about as near [illegible] acknowledgement of the truth of the insinuation as might be, in Jas.'s [illegible]

[illegible] somebody,' [illegible]

As [illegible] Abijah put [illegible]

"I [illegible] a farmer and conse[illegible] to be no better [illegible] other hand, I do [illegible] naturally smart [illegible] right to h[illegible] savings [illegible] you underst[illegible] [illegible] until [illegible]

[illegible] They force it on us as [illegible] say. They'll write us letters [illegible] pleading us to come and re[illegible] of their wealth.

"Yes, sir, gentlemen, that's what they'll do, and the joke of it is that they're as crooked as a dog's hind leg themselves. They're calculating all the time that they'll take our money away from us, so when they do get skinned they can't make no holler."

"No Robbery to Rob a Robber"

"Now, what I do claim," continued Abijah, refreshing himself with tobacco, "what I do claim, is that it ain't no robbery to rob a robber and it's nothing more than straight business to take advantage of a man that's trying to take advantage of you.

"If you don't, somebody else will. That's all. If these city lunkheads was satisfied with what they made honestly, we couldn't no more than short-measure 'em or water their milk, but they're grasping and greedy and they want some easy money and that's where we get 'em."

His audience seemed to take the same view of the matter. One or two questions were asked, but Abijah evaded them and went his way with a large complacency that had been growing on him.

As time went on crops failed and business declined. There was a scarcity of money throughout the land and the rap of the sheriff's hammer echoed in every court house square.

Abijah was one of the few who appeared to feel no pinch. He stinted and scraped, but he had always done that. Even when the bank failed he maintained his composure, to the amazement of his wife and of his son, Adoniram. Abijah explained.

"I haven't had a red cent in there for over ten years," he said calmly.

"What a man needs," he went on, "ain't no bank book showing what he ought to have coming to him. There's lots of folks has got those and couldn't get a sack o' flour on 'em. What a man wants is a gold reserve. Gold don't never bust up nor rust up; it ain't worth ten dollars one day and ten cents the next; it ain't subject to pink-eye, pip or panic; the seventeen-year locust doesn't leave a dent in it, and it's too heavy to be a drug on the market. I've hefted it, so I know."

"But we ain't got no gold reserve, 'Bije," his wife reasoned.

"Oh, ain't we?" chuckled Abijah. "You don't tell me! Well, well, that's too bad, ain't it? All the same, don't you lose no sleep about it. I ain't going to. I'm going to make believe I can put my hand on it any time I want to."

Knowing him, they were reassured. Fearing him, they did not insist on particulars. These he withheld until the day of his death, when he expressed his penitence for the wrong he had done the men who had sold him the gold ingots.

"They only wanted to sell me two of them, in the first place," he said, "and then they asked half of what the gold weighed out. I made 'em weigh every last [illegible] and I found out they'd lied on the weight. Then I seen they had to have some cash money right away and I knowed the ingots had been stole. They said enough so I ketched on to that. Well, I [illegible] right down on them poor suckers. I wouldn't pay more than a fourth of what they weighed, and I made 'em sell all they had and pay for testing what they bored out."

Son Ad[illegible] was about to express himself, even at that awful moment, but the doctor punched him violently in the ribs and Abijah died happy.

"And that was the main thing, after all," remarked Jas. Hood. "Them ingots couldn't have give 'Bije no better satisfaction if they'd been sure-enough gold. [illegible] Ah was the one got bunkoed, come right down to it."

A Successful Wife

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

ESTHER CAREY, a poor girl whose parents are dead, leaving her with several young brothers and sisters to support, comes from Bracketsville, a suburb, to begin life in New York. She works her way up from a position as typewriter at $3 a week until at twenty-five she is head of her own office force in a Wall street skyscraper.

William Falsworth, a rich mining president, who has a neglectful wife, falls in love with Esther and asks her to elope with him to the West. She refuses and he becomes enraged. He learns that Stephen Kirkland, a nephew of the immensely wealthy Senator Bellars, is smitten with her and he threatens to kill Kirkland. He tells Esther that Kirkland, who is one of her patrons, is a reprobate and not fit for any good woman to associate with.

Kirkland, after a long courtship, wins Esther's consent to marry, but Senator Bellars, when he hears of it, is enraged and cuts Kirkland in his will. Stephen decides to earn his way by writing a book. They marry in New York and live in a boarding house in Washington square. Stephen is sorely disappointed when his book is rejected by the publisher and takes to drink.

Under the influence of his wife he reforms again. About this time an aunt dies leaving him $10,000. His friend Stu[illegible] induces him to invest it in a railroad scheme.

They go to the Adirondacks for a vacation. There is a beautiful girl there, a Miss Pagee. She becomes infatuated with Kirkland, who takes her out canoeing frequently. They go out one day, become lost, and do not return until 3 o'clock in the morning.

Kirkland tells Esther that he is going to be a very rich man when his deal goes through, but that he is [illegible] to put up more margin for a day. He asks her to lend him what money she has in the bank. She gives him a check for $1,700 and he goes away to the city.

After he has gone Miss Pagee becomes very friendly in her manner towards Esther.

A Kiss.

"I THINK I will sit out th[illegible] with you, Mrs. Kirkland," and s[illegible] and talked with me about the [illegible], making fun of them rather cuttingly. Then she asked me if I had heard from Mr. Kirkland, and for a minute I did not answer. I knew how I would feel if she had heard. I didn't want her to [illegible] kind who would tell his wife she had received a letter. When I said that I had had no word from him, she exclaimed softly: "I am so sorry. I hoped you could give me some news of him and his exciting fortnight."

After a few minutes she leaned over and took my hands in hers.

"I admire you awfully, Mrs. Kirkland. Please don't think me a stupid flatterer to tell you so. You are the sort of woman I have longed all my life to be—so quiet and so strong."

She got up and said that she must go upstairs, and we walked along side by side to the door of the stairs that led up to my room. She was taller a good deal than I was—nearly as tall as my husband—and she bent down and whispered:

"Let me kiss you. May I?" And she did quickly, and as I turned to mount the stairs I thought I heard her say, "Forgive me," but perhaps it was only good-night; anyway, we parted there like that, and she was laughing and gay, and her soft scarf was all floating around her bare neck and arms.

"Why, you act like you were going away," I said.

"Didn't my aunt tell you? I thought she had told you. We are leaving to-morrow for Lake Champlain; we are off on the 6 o'clock stage. And will you be sure to say good-bye to Mr. Kirkland for me?"

And my first thought was: "I am glad she won't be here when he comes on Sunday." And then my next thought was "I am sorry for her."

A Jealous Feeling.

The next day was Saturday, and I was worrying about my husband. Somehow, until Miss Pagee had said good-bye as she did, I hadn't been able to think of him once in the right way. Her figure had been between us every minute. But when the next day came I went and telegraphed to his office.

At noon a lady told me that Miss Pagee and Mrs. Burnett had not gone—that Mrs. Burnett had caught a bad cold, and they were staying on over Sunday. It shocked me dreadfully. It didn't seem as though I could bear it. I went up to my room, thinking how silly I was and how foolish I had been all the time to imagine that I could keep Mr. Kirkland. I thought of Senator Bellars, and how he would shrug his shoulders and say that he had warned us both. I wanted my work back again. Then I decided it wasn't work I wanted.

"Esther Carey," I told myself, sitting there in the window, with the blinds drawn to keep out the heat and the flies, "this isn't yet the hardest thing a woman has to do. Aren't you up to it? Aren't you ashamed?" And I was. But it was the hardest thing I had done so far, anyway! Through the blinds I saw the ladies [illegible]king and doing fancy work. Miss [illegible]ger, her back to me, sat with them, a [illegible] to one side, her white parasol, edged with lace, in her hand.

I made myself look at her long enough to let some of the jealous feeling that [illegible] all through me die down. It wasn't easy. I just stared at her through the blinds until I had thought out this: "If she is the woman for Mr. Kirkland, and I have made a selfish mistake, why, I have got to find some way or another to put it right." When I had said this to myself and meant it I felt better.

She wore a big hat with white roses around it, and seemed to be sitting there waiting for some one. The stage came in from the station, and crowds of passengers got off from New York. She thought Mr. Kirkland would come up by that stage. She talked with the guests, and one of the passengers gave her a paper and pointed to something in it which she looked at. Then I saw her go down the steps toward the boat-house under her white parasol—one of the gentlemen walked along with her.

Millie Drowned

I got a book out of my trunk and read until I got interested in a story, and then, as it was warm and I hadn't anything else to do, I laid down and went to sleep till I was wakened by some one bursting into my room and rushing up to me. It was Mrs. Burnett in her dressing-gown, her hair done in kid curlers. She rushed over to me, and fell on her knees, clutching me.

"My God!" she cried, "my God! Keep me here—don't let me go out of here!"

As soon as I could I asked her what was the matter.

"Millie's drowned—drowned!" she cried and murmured, and held on to me like a crazy woman, praying me not to let her see her niece—not to let her go out of my room.

I tried to get her to tell me what had happened, and one or two of the other ladies came into my room in great excitement.

It seems that Miss Pagee had been paddling out on the lake, and that her paddle slipped, and that the canoe capsized and she fell into the water. A guide saw her and hurried as fast as he could, but it was some distance. Before he could get there she had gone under the third time.

"They're bringing her in now," the ladies said.

I don't know how I got rid of Mrs. Burnett, but I did, and went right down stairs, and by the time the guide's boat was at the landing I was waiting there. He carried her up in his arms as if she were a child. She hung all limp and slender, and he brought her out like that. There was quite a crowd gathered. We took her into the boat-house, up-stairs, and the doctors did everything they could, but it was no use—she was drowned.

The Man Who Worries Over the Ghosts of the Past

If He Has Had an Unhappy Childhood, Let Him Brighten His Life by Making Some Child Happy To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

A CERTAIN man had a tragic childhood—robbed of everything that makes childhood bright and happy. He was the son of parents who were desperately poor—poor in purse, poor in body, poor in mind and heart and soul.

There was not even love in his home, and he grew up in an atmosphere of continual strife and wrangling. He was ill fed, uneducated, neglected, beaten, mistreated in every way, and at twelve years of age was thrown out into the world to earn his own living.

By sheer force of character this boy, now a man, has worked his way out of poverty and incompetency and ignorance. To-day he is a successful man, admired, respected, loved by those about him, but he has not been able to leave behind him the bitter memories of the past.

They darken all his present and shadow his future, and he is haunted by the recollections of all he has suffered. He realizes that no one can beat him now, or tyrannize over him, or humiliate him, and yet he is terrorized by the ghosts of the blows and the abuse that he once knew.

This man asks me what he shall do to allay these evil spirits that are driving him mad. I do not know. The Emmanuel Church movement claims to deal successfully with such cases, but, personally, I know nothing of it.

Common Sense Might Cure

My own remedy would be large doses of common sense, repeated daily and hourly, until a cure was effected. I should open the windows of my soul to everything that was gay and bright, and fill my life so running over with work and play that there would be no time in it for melancholy reminiscences.

Let this man who has had so many sorrows in the past stop thinking how unfortunate he has been and realize how lucky he is in having his sorrows over and not present or to come. It is a sad thing to have had a blighted childhood, but it isn't as sad, by a million miles, as it is to have a blighted manhood.

This man weeps, because when he was a little boy he was ragged and hungry. He might well weep tears of blood if, in his manhood, he was one of those miserable human derelicts that spend their days sitting on park benches and who sleep on cellar gratings or crave the hospitality of municipal lodging houses.

If there is a piteous spectacle in the world it is that of a man who lacks manhood, the man who lacks the strength of body and brain to make even a living, the man who is nothing but a human hulk that shames its maker. A man who, having once been a gentleman, had fallen so low, might well go crazy thinking of his past, but the man who has had in him the glorious qualities that raise him out of the mire on to the mountain-tops has got nothing to grieve over, and should spend his time in chanting jubilees.

Marry a Jolly Woman

Another thing that I would suggest to my correspondent is that morbidness is a disease that grows by what it feeds upon. It is egotism in its most acute form, and the only remedy for it is to quit thinking about one's self and go to thinking about somebody else.

If this man who had an unhappy childhood wants to banish the ghosts of it he can do so most effectually by making other children happy.

The best plan would be for him to marry some jolly, fat, good-natured woman whose laugh is hung on a hair trigger and raise up half a dozen merry youngsters of his own, on whom he can shower all the tenderness and love and ponies and drums that his father and mother never gave him.

But if he doesn't want to marry let him adopt a baby or two anyway, and save them from an orphan asylum life and make them happy. You can't ponder long over dead and gone griefs when you are stuffing your pockets with toys to take to children and picturing to yourself the joy of the little faces that are watching for you.

There's magic, white magic, in little fingers, and they can exorcise any demon that rides the soul into the black abysses. And the advantage of a child over any other form of diversion is that there is constant change in it. Every day the little mind turns toward you a new facet that keeps you always guessing and always alert with interest.

Finally, I should call my correspondent's attention to the fact that in letting his past spoil his present he is taking a cowardly attitude toward life. He is surrendering to misfortune instead of fighting. And he is making a peculiarly dastardly surrender, because he is running up the white flag when victory is in his hand.

After all, life is as we take it. There is not one of us so fortunate as not to have some sorrow that would darken our whole day if we sat up and nursed it and dwelt upon it. We all have our secret graveyards, in which we might spend our time beating upon our breasts and lamenting; but, fortunately, most of us have sense enough to refrain from perpetually digging in our cemeteries, and we fill our thoughts with the pleasures of to-day and the rosy anticipations of to-morrow, instead of the griefs of yesteryear.

So the world is preserved from being one vast madhouse filled with melancholia patients.

Should Bless Great Luck

I am sorry, very, very sorry, for this man who is prosperous and successful, yet haunted by the ghosts of his childhood, but my real tears go with the man who is hounded by the bill collector, who has a sick wife and many children to support, and is trying cheerfully and gravely to do it on fifteen dollars a week.

The man who hasn't got anything to grieve over but a trouble that is thirty or forty years old is playing in big luck. He ought to realize what a cinch he has got. The boil that hurts is the one that you are wrestling with on the back of your neck at the present time.

To Develop the Bust

To Beauty Editor. I am so ashamed of my thin bust that I want to ask you if there is any harmless way to develop it. My hips and the rest of my body are right for the present styles and I do not want them any larger, but my bust is so flat that I would try anything that gave hope of even three or four more inches development.
MARY B.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex, and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c. to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 27 F A, Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned, the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders or tonics, as they increase the hips and limbs and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

Desperate Desmond

YOU WON'T MARRY ME, EH, ROSAMOND! YOU MUST RUN THE GAUNTLET. GET READY, OLD PALS!
I'D RATHER RUN IT AND DIE THAN MARRY YOU, DESMOND. I LOVE ONLY CLAUDE ECLAIRE.
HURRY, BOYS, MY SWEETHEART'S LIFE IS AT STAKE. SHE MUST NOT BE CLUBBED TO DEATH. PICK OUT YOUR MEN AND LET FLY
CURSES! SHE ESCAPES UNHARMED. IT'S MY RIVAL'S WORK
LUCKY US WILD WEST SHOW GUYS GOT STRANDED IN BORNEO ALRIGHT
THE INDIANS OF THE TROUPE WILL SHOW DESMOND AND HIS BAND SOME REAL SCALPING
THEY GOT US NOW, PAL, BUT WE WILL FOIL THEM YET AND STEAL ROSAMOND
YOWEEE WHOOPEE YEOW YIP WOOP!
HERSHFIELD

Did you ever run the gauntlet, gentle reader? No? Well, take our tip and don't try it unless you have to. But, when, come to think of it, nobody ever does go up against that game unless he is forced to do it. Rosamond doesn't like the idea at all, but Desmond threatens to marry her if she doesn't, so what can the poor girl do?

The wild men are all lined up ready to soak Rosamond with their war clubs as she passes between them. You'd hardly think any bunch of men could be so uncivilized as to treat a lady thus, but our artist says the pictures were drawn on the spot, and far be it from us to dispute his word. Still, we have our own opinion.

Cheer up, gentle reader! There is still hope. If we are not very much mistaken, that figure in the foreground is our brave hero, Claude Eclaire. He has a crowd with him, too, only you can't see them, because they are not in the picture. We know they are there, however. Claude wouldn't be talking to himself, would he?

Pipe the cowboys. They have just landed in Borneo with Coyote Cal's Wild West Aggregation, and they are just in time to help our hero rescue his sweetheart. When Claude gives the word, they let fly with their lassoes and rope the wild men's clubs, thereby putting the kibosh on Desperate Desmond's "run the gauntlet" stunt.

It is extremely kind of the cowboys to go to all this trouble, and, besides, it will be a mighty good ad. for their show. No newspaper could refuse to print the story of a thrilling rescue like that, even if the editor did suspect that it was all framed up by the press agent. And this isn't all of the story, either.

The cowpunchers have got Desmond and his wild men all tied up like a bunch of asparagus, and they have sent for the Indians from the show to scalp the scoundrels. Here come the red men now. What they will do to that Borneo bunch will be something fierce. All the horrible and disgusting details will be shown in to-morrow's pictures.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Calls Warren on the Long-Distance Telephone at Midnight

HELEN gazed sleeplessly out of her moon-lit window. From below came the faint striking of the dining room clock. She counted the slow, regular strokes—twelve—it was midnight.

For three long hours she had lain there, tossing feverishly. Her head ached, her eyes burned, and the throbbing pain in her heart seemed unbearable.

To the telegram she had sent Warren yesterday—there had been no reply! All last night and all to-day she had waited quiveringly for an answer—but none had come. What could it mean? Surely he must be ill—very ill, or he would have answered.

How much longer could she bear this suspense?

Through the open window came the sounds of the crickets and tree frogs, and the night air was softly fragrant. She drew a kimona about her and went over and knelt by the window. The moonlight was almost as bright as day.

There was a sudden rustle among the lilac bushes under her window and Rover sprang out and ran across the yard.

"Here Rover—Rover!" Helen called softly, so softly that it was hardly more than a whisper. But Rover heard and came running back under the window. He looked up at her with eloquent eyes and waving tail. And then as though he felt the witchery of the night and the moonlight, he lay down and rolled over and over on the soft grass.

The Night Walk in the Garden

Yielding to a sudden impulse, Helen threw a heavier wrap about her, silently stole down stairs, unlocked the front door, paused for a moment on the vine covered porch and then went out into the yard.

Rover came bounding toward her.

"Hush—hush! No, no, you mustn't bark," and Rover, seeming to understand, contented himself with a low whine of delight as he leaped about her.

Unheeding the dew-wet grass which soon drenched her bedroom slippers, Helen walked slowly about the yard, blindly seeking relief in motion from her tortured thoughts.

What could it mean? Why had he not answered her telegram? Oh, why had she come on this trip? Surely it would have been better to have stayed and endured his coldness than to have come out here and suffer this anxiety. Should she throw her pride to the winds and go back to-morrow?

And then came a thought so fearful that she hid her face in her hands. What if he should NOT WANT HER TO COME BACK? Was THAT what he was trying to show by his silence? Oh, no—no; she knew it could not be!

And yet just the thought had so unnerved her that she sank down on a bench under the lilac bushes and sobbed convulsively. Rover, with his paws in her lap, gazed up at her with eyes full of distress. She put her arms about him and rested her cheek against his head.

"Oh, Rover—Rover, what shall I do? What shall I do?"

And Rover could only whine in answer.

At length she turned slowly back to the house. As she stole through the dark hall, feeling her way along the wall with her hand, she accidentally touched the telephone, causing a faint stir of the bell.

The Long-Distance Telephone

The telephone! The telephone! The same telephone that was in their apartment in Boston, where Warren was now sleeping. In a few moments she could be talking with him!

She was leaning heavily against the wall. Why had she not thought of that? In this way she could end her suspense at once.

The cost? But what difference would that make if she could only hear from him! If she could only KNOW what had happened!

Without stopping to consider, just following the wild impulse that led her on, she felt for the receiver and took it down.

"Hello!" gazing in the darkness before her.

"Is this a long distance telephone? Can I speak to Boston from here?"

"To Boston?" the operator's voice answered sleepily. "Yes, all the 'phones are long distance."

"How much will it be?"

"Something like six dollars, I think. Hold the wire, I'll look it up." A pause "Yes, six-fifty for three minutes and two dollars for each additional minute or fraction thereof," evidently reading from the rate book.

"But if I shouldn't get the party?" asked Helen.

"Then it doesn't cost you anything."

"Well, I want to try," desperately. "But don't charge this to my father, Dr. Allen. I'll come down in the morning and pay you. Now will you try to get Boston? Will it take long?"

"Not very. What's the number of the 'phone and the name of the party?"

"Brookline 2603, and the name is Warren E. Curtis."

"All right, I'll call you when I make the connections."

"Oh no, I don't want you to ring this 'phone! I don't want to wake anyone up. Can't I hold the receiver?"

"Why, yes, you can. But it will be some time."

"That doesn't matter. I'll hold the 'phone. Just make the connections as quick as you can."

Waiting for the Distant Voice

With every quivering nerve strained to the breaking point, she stood there in the dark, leaning against the wall, the receiver at her ear.

What would be the result of this? What would the next few minutes mean? What would they bring to her?

The wires buzzed loudly. She could hear the mingling of distant voices, with occasional words "St. Louis," "New York." And then at last she heard some one give the number "Brookline 2603!" She was cold all over now, and trembling so she could hardly hold the receiver.

Another wait that seemed an eternity, then——

"Here's Boston. You want Warren E. Curtis, Brookline 2603?"

Helen heard herself say "Yes."

"All right, there's your party. Go ahead."

"Hello! Hello!" she called quiveringly. But she heard only the buzzing of the wires. "Hello! Hello!" she cried again, but still only the deafening buzz.

"Go ahead! There's your party," repeated central.

"But I can't get them," Helen called desperately.

Then came a faint "Hello." Strange and far away as it sounded it was WARREN'S VOICE!

"Oh, Warren—Warren! Are you ill? It is I—Helen! Why haven't you written? Why don't you answer my telegram? Oh, what has been the matter?"

Then again the faint sound of his voice, but through the buzzing wires she could not distinguish a word.

How Warren Answered

"Oh, I can't hear you! I can't hear you!" frantically. "Are you ill—just tell me that?"

Again his voice—still indistinct.

"Oh, I can't hear you! I can't hear you!" she sobbed.

And then came plainly: "No, I'm not ill. You'll get a letter to-morrow. Do you realize what this is costing? There's no excuse for it. Don't ever do such a fool thing again! Good-by."

"Wait! Wait! Oh, Warren—Warren"—— she cried. But he had cut off.

Only the buzzing of the wires answered her.

DANGERS OF FAT
HOW FAT AFFECTS THE STOMACH

STOMACH

The stomach is the seat of digestion, wherein are separated from food the nutritious elements that build and sustain our bodies. When the stomach ceases to change the fat producing elements of food, into muscle and sinew, there comes an excess of fat, where there should be firm, hard flesh. This excess fat collects in most undesirable places, impeding motion until movement becomes an exertion. The layers of fat check the stomach's natural movements for digestion of food—thus increasing the trouble. But so many people have found relief in the famous Marmola Prescription that there is hardly any necessity for obesity. And now that Marmola Prescription Tablets can be obtained there is even less excuse for two much fat. Dieting and exercise are rendered unnecessary by this new form of fat reduction. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 73 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case. They quickly and harmlessly reduce the overfat body at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day, improve digestion, clear the complexion and promote bodily health.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a young woman of great beauty, has been slain in her rich apartments in the Feldisham Mansions. Rupert Osborne, her wealthy American suitor, is believed by all London to be the murderer. Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent and advises him to hide in Tormouth, a seaside village.

Furneaux, the great detective, is unaccountably agitated when assigned to the case, and his chief, Inspector Winter, resolves to watch him.

Furneaux learns from Hylda Prout, Osborne's secretary, that a dagger and axe-head, like the one used to kill Miss De Bercy, were missing from the private museum immediately after the murder.

Winter, tracking Furneaux, his own subordinate, learns that he was in Osborne's house and in the museum the very day of the murder.

Detective Clarke finds a letter which tells how Mlle. De Bercy was marked for death as a traitress by the anarchist society.

Chief Winter learns a new thing from the murdered woman's cook: Furneaux was quarreling with Miss De Bercy a short time previous to the crime.

Furneaux goes to Tormouth, finds Osborne is posing as Mr. Glyn, breaks into his room and discovers a letter which shows he is deeply in love with Rosalind Marsh, a girl he met at the beach there.

He gets Hylda Prout, whom he knows is in love with Osborne, to come to Tormouth. Her jealousy aroused, she writes Rosalind a letter which makes her act coldly toward Osborne. The latter, packing his bag, comes across a blood-stained bit of lace. He throws it out of the window and then, feeling that he has made a mistake, hastens out after it. It is restored to him by an Italian, who had picked it up. The Italian later tells Hylda that he himself put the lace in Osborne's bag.

The next day they all go back to London. In the girl who opens the door for the Marshes, Detective Clarke recognizes Pauline, who had been Rose de Bercy's maid. He makes her give up a book, which turns out to be Rose de Bercy's diary and in which the last entry is:

"If I am killed this night it will be by —— or C. E. F." Where the blank occurred the name had been heavily scratched through with pen and ink.

TO'DAY'S INSTALMENT

By GORDON HOLMES

The Inquest.

SHE described it, its shape, the blunt edges of the long and pointed blade, the handle, the label on it with the date. It was Saracen, and it, too, like the celt, had once been used, in all probability, in the hands of wild men in shedding blood.

"And you are sure of the date when you first missed it from its place in the museum?"

"It was on the third day after the murder"—and Hylda Prout's glance traveled for an instant to the veiled, bent head of Rosalind, as it seemed to droop lower after every answer that she gave.

"And you are unable to conceive how both the dagger and the celt could have vanished from their places about that time?"

"Yes, I conceive that they were stolen," she said—"unless Mr. Osborne made them a present to some friend, for I have known him to do that."

"'Stolen,' you say," the Treasury man remarked. "But you have no grounds for such a belief? You suggest no motive for a thief to steal these two objects and no other from the museum? You know of no one who entered the room during those days?"

"No, I know of no one—except Inspector Furneaux, who seems to have entered it about six o'clock on the evening of the murder."

The coroner looked up sharply from his notes. This was news to the court.

"Oh?" said the examiner. "Let us hear how that came about."

She explained that Furneaux had called to see Mr. Osborne, and, while awaiting his coming in the library, had apparently strolled into the museum. Jenkins, Mr. Osborne's valet, was her informant. It was not evidence, but the statement was out before the court well knew where it was leading.

Winter's lip quivered with suppressed agitation, and over Clarke's face came a strange expression of amazement, a stare of utter wonderment widening his eyes, as when one has been violently struck and knows not by what or whom.

When Hylda Prout stepped down, the coroner invited the officer in charge of the case to explain the curious bit of intelligence given by the last witness.

Furneaux, not one whit disturbed in manner, rose to give his evidence of the incident. Oddly enough, his eyes dwelt all the time, with a dull deadness of expression in them, upon the lowered face of Winter.

It was true, he told the court, that he had called upon Mr. Osborne that evening; it was true that he was asked to wait; and he seemed to remember now that he had wandered through a doorway into a room full of curios to have a look at them in those idle moments.

"So you knew Mr. Osborne before the murder?" inquired the court.

"Yes. I knew him very well by sight and repute, as a man about town, though not to speak to."

"And what was the nature of the business on which you called to see him?"

"It was a purely personal matter."

The coroner paused, with the air of a man who suddenly discovers a morass where he imagined there was a clear road.

"And did you see Mr. Osborne that evening?" he asked at length.

"No, sir. After I had waited some time the valet entered and told me that Mr. Osborne had just telephoned to say that he would not be home before dinner. So I came away."

Sounded Amazing

"Have you spoken to Mr. Osborne since then about the matter on which you called to see him that evening?"

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

"Because after that evening there was no longer any need."

Well, to the more experienced officials in court this explanation had an unusual sound, but to Winter, who slowly but surely was gathering the threads of the murder in the flat into his hands, and to Clarke, too, who had in his possession Rose de Bercy's diary taken from Pauline Dessaulx, it sounded so amazing that he could scarce believe his ears.

However, the coroner nodded to Furneaux, and Furneaux turned to Osborne's solicitor, who suddenly resolved to ask no questions, so the dapper little man seated himself again at the table—much to the relief of the jury, who were impatient of any red herring drawn across the trail of evidence that led unmistakably to the millionaire.

Then, at last, appeared six witnesses who spoke, no longer against, but for Osborne. Four were International polo players, and two were waiters at the Ritz Hotel, and all were positive that at the hour when Mrs. Bates saw her employer at home, they saw him elsewhere—or some among them saw him, and the others, without seeing him, knew that he was elsewhere.

Against this unassailable testimony was the obviously honest cabman, and Osborne's own housekeeper; and the jury, level-headed men, fully inclined to be just, though perhaps, in this instance, passionate and prejudiced, weighed it in their hearts.

But Furneaux, to suit his own purposes, had contrived that the tag of lace should come last; and with its mute appeal for vengeance everything in favor of Osborne was swept out of the bosom of his Majesty's lieges, and only wrath and abhorrence raged there.

The Verdict

Why, if he had actually killed Rose de Bercy, Osborne should carry about that incriminating bit of lace in his bag, no one seemed to stop to ask; but when the dreadful thing was held up before his eyes, the twelve good men and true looked at it and at each other, and a sort of shuddering abhorrence pervaded the court.

Even the Italian Antonio, who had contrived to be present as representing some obscure paper in Paris—the very man who had put the lace into the bag—shook his head over Osborne's guilt, being, as it were, carried out of himself by the vigor and rush of the mental hurricane which swept around him!

When Osborne, put into the box, repeated that the "celt" was really his, this candor now won no sympathy. When he said solemnly that the bit of lace had been secreted among his belongings by some unknown hand, the small company of men present in court despised him for so childish a lie.

His spirit, as he stood in that box, exposed to the animus of so many spirits, felt as if it was being hurried by a kind of magnetic gale to destruction; his fingers, his knees shivered, his voice cracked in his throat; he could not keep his eyes from being wild, his skin from being white, and in his heart his own stupefied conscience accused him of the sin that his brothers charged him with.

Though the jury soon ascertained from the coroner's injunctions what their verdict had to be, they still took twenty minutes to think of it. However, they knew well that the coroner had spoken to them under the suggestion of the police, who, no doubt, would conduct their own business best; so in the end they came in with the verdict of "wilful murder committed by some person or persons unknown."

And now it was the turn of the mob to have their say. The vast crowd was kept in leash until they were vouchsafed just a glimpse of Osborne, in the midst of a mass of police guarding him, as he emerged from the court to his automobile.

Then suddenly, as it were, the hoarse bellow of the storm opened to roar him out of the universe—an overpowering load of sound for one frail heart to bear without quailing.

But if Osborne's heart quailed, there was one heart there that did not quail, one smooth forehead that suddenly flashed and frowned in opposition to a world's current, and dared to think and feel alone.

As the mob yelped its execration, Rosalind Marsh cried a protest of "Shame, oh Shame!"

It's a thing one often sees.
Two can live as cheap as one.

Yes, it would be lots of fun
Just to live on bread and cheese.
Really it is often done.

I have not much ready "mon."
Yet, once pay the marriage fees,
Two can live as cheap as one.

As for bills, we'll let 'em run.
We can pay them by degrees.
Really it is often done.

Don't be scary. Try it, hon.
We will neither starve nor freeze.
Two can live as cheap as one.

Just lie basking in the sun.
Listen to the droning bees.
Really it is often done.
Two can live as cheap as one.

Heard in the Telephone Booth

By ADA PATTERSON

"HELLO, that you Charlie?" A confident voice spoke resonantly into the mouthpiece of the public telephone in the booth next to mine.

A flat metallic sound by way of response.

"I want to talk to you about Frank Jones. He says he's got you on his side and you're going to give him the job."

More flat metallic sounds with a note of protest in them. "Of course, I don't want to interfere, but I want to tell you something that maybe you don't know. He's always quarrelling with his job."

Evident interrogation from the other end of the wire.

"I mean he rows with his bread and butter. If you tell him to do something he wants to know why something else can't be done, or why it can't be done at a different time. He never likes the fellow he's working for or the fellows he's working with, nor the place he's working in. There's always something wrong. If there's nothing else it's that he has too much work to do or he has to work too late."

More metallic interrogation.

"Howard Smith can do the work as well as he can and he does it willingly. That's a great point. There's nothing too much trouble for him. Yes, he's the same age and size and weighs about the same. Yes! He's as healthy as Jones. But he's a mile ahead of him in disposition."

A short clicking sentence from the other end.

"All right," replied the resonant voice in the booth next to mine. "I'll send him up this afternoon."

"Thank you. Yes, I knew you wanted to know. Wouldn't hire that kind of a fellow myself. Good-bye."

Howard Smith got the job.

A Bit of Wisdom

A great deal of wisdom permeated the partition that separated the next telephone booth from mine, all the wisdom of the immense saving of the waste of friction.

In one of the mining States of the West, I visited a great smelting works. The neurotic members of the party from the East had protested against the visit. They were sure their nerves would be torn to shreds by "horrid noises." We were led into the principal room of the smelting works and our guide pointed to a huge iron piston, of many tons' weight and several thousand horse-power, rising and falling as steadily as a clock ticks, as silently as a rose leaf detaches itself from the flower and floats to the ground. The rest of the party wandered to the other rooms, stopped to scrutinize whirling wheels and flying bands. I remained beside the huge silent piston, fascinated by its tremendous, quiet power.

Since, I have met persons who reminded me of that huge, silent worker, and the humans were as fascinating as the machine, as great, as powerful, as noiselessly effective. It is a question of economy. The quantity of force in us all is limited. If we waste a third of it in fault finding, a third of it in quarrelling, there is only a third for our work, and since the work allotted to most persons demands all their energy, the work only lacks two-thirds of being completely done. The man who lost the job for Frank Jones and won it for Howard Smith was right. Given equal ability, it is the working disposition that counts. If Frank Jones wasted his strength in continual fault-finding and quarrelling, he had not enough left to do his work well. If he had heard the telephone confidences I overheard, he would have said the man of the sonorous voice had "worked him out." The truth is he worked himself out by rendering himself unfit.

There is a charge against some workers, especially in the East, that they have bent the back to the rod of discipline so long that they have become servile. The broken spirit is the saddest sight in the world. But that of the man who wastes the gold of his energy in chafing against unchangeable conditions is the most irritating.

How It Paid One Man

The man who has joy in his work doesn't fret at the conditions in which he performs it. The task is the thing to him and to accomplish it well despite the handicapping surroundings is his joy. A man who works in such a spirit need not trouble about rewards. The rewards will take care of themselves and that probably with munificence.

When a president of one of the richest Eastern railroads was elected to his high office at a salary of one hundred thousand dollars a year, twice that of the President of the United States, he was asked to explain how he had achieved it.

"I am being paid now for the time when I was an ambitious young clerk and for what I did without pay," he answered. "When I was a young clerk I used to stay after hours to finish my work and to learn what I could about the business. The other clerks used to laugh at me and say, 'You're not paid for that.' Well, I'm being paid for it now."

This man didn't quarrel about his job. He was in love with it. And a hundred thousand dollars a year is his reward.

CAUGHT!

"I am sorry to be critical, my dear," said Mr. Lambkin, "but this pie is not the kind that mother used to make—not by a long shot."

"It's too bad, Henry," said Mrs. Lambkin amiably. "I don't know what to do about it. Perhaps you'd better ring her up on the 'phone and tell her. She sent it over this afternoon."

RECIPE

Put one beaten egg to one cup Borden's Evaporated Milk and three cups water; add a little salt, one teacup of yeast, with flour sufficient to make a stiff batter. Set it over night. TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

HILL STOCKS AS MARKET LEADERS

NEW YORK, June 1.—Strength in the Hill stocks consequential on the report of the absorption of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad by the Hill system was the chief feature of the stock market at the opening to-day.

Although the statements of earnings by Pennsylvania in April made an excellent impression, this stock opened with a fractional decline. This issue has been under pressure for a considerable period.

The following gains were recorded in the initial trading: Canadian Pac. ¼, Amal. Copper ⅛, B. R. T. ⅛, Great Northern pf ¼, Northern Pac. common ¼, C. & O. ⅛. American Smelting and Union Pac. were unchanged. Pennsylvania was off ⅜, and U. S. Steel off ¼.

The effect of the Tobacco Trust decision was but faintly marked in the trading on the exchange. American Tobacco opened at 430 on the curb, off 70 points from yesterday's opening quotations. Trading on the curb was active and the tone was steady.

Americans on the London market were firm, due to covering by the shorts. Support of Canadian Pacific in London was again shown.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The tobacco decision is hailed as an aid to the bull campaigners because of the court will show the business interests how to conduct a great corporation without violating the law.

$ $ $

American Tobacco is now selling at about its normal price. The advance to $520 and the subsequent decline were both for dramatic effect. Not many persons made any money on the advance nor lost on the decline. The queerest freak was a decline of Tobacco preferred stock to below par. State Street in general paid but little attention to the antics of the Tobacco crowd, for their style of manipulation is old fashioned. Less than 2,000 shares all told were sold out of 400,000 issued.

That the railroads do not regard the Interstate Commerce Commission as existing wholly for the benefit of the shippers is shown by the appeal of the Pennsylvania, Lackawanna and other aggrieved trunk lines to that body to have the reduced rate of the Delaware & Hudson and Erie, for the Hudson River, Albany & Binghamton route to Chicago, suspended. The opposing lines tried to persuade the two roads to withdraw their new tariff of their own volition, but, failing in that, they sent representatives to Washington to invoke the commission's aid.

The "rule of reason" to be applied makes it evident that the administration will not be harsh with corporations unless they are gross offenders. Big concerns like the Steel Trust, for instance, have undoubtedly committed acts now and then which are technical violations of the law, but it is understood at Washington that nothing has been found in the conduct of the trust to justify suits such as those against the Oil and Tobacco companies. In fact, Attorney-General Wickersham is quoted as saying that it would be improper to begin any action against the Steel Trust until the congressional investigation had been completed, even if he were intending anything of the kind. As the investigation cannot be finished for a year or more, Congress has in reality prevented action against the Steel Trust. In the meantime the two model trusts that the United States Circuit Courts have been ordered to construct out of the Oil and Tobacco companies will be finished and all other corporations will bring themselves within the law without being dragged to court.

Weakness of the 6 per cent. bonds in the face of strength by the 4 per cents is accounted for by a belief on the part of investors that upon dissolution both issues will be retired at par. Most bond dealers believe both issues will be retired at par, but there are others who say this will not be done because it would be an injustice to the holders of the 6 per cent. issue who purchased above par. They think the company will set aside securities or money enough to insure the payment of interest, and provide for redemption at maturity. Persons who believe that the bonds will be retired declare this would not be an injustice, because the premium represented the value of speculative possibilities and should have been considered by the purchasers of the bonds.

That there has been a great improvement in sentiment toward long-term security issues has been plainly demonstrated by the quick absorption of recent bond offerings. Both the Detroit Tunnel 4½s and the Oregon-Washington 4s were heavily oversubscribed, and both issues sold at a premium on the Curb, although the advance in the latter's case was slight. The new Harriman bonds were offered in London simultaneously with the official announcement here, and the foreign demand proved as great as that by local buyers. Half of the $25,000,000 issue will be allotted to the London bidders. To encourage a wide distribution, the bonds will not be awarded on a pro rata basis, but will be placed among bona fide investors so far as possible.

Rain fell in Minnesota, North and South Dakota on Memorial Day, notably 1.52 inches at Fergus Fls, where it has been dry. Crop reports are excellent. The biggest corn acreage ever known is reported by professors from Minnesota State Agricultural College who have just returned from the country. As to stage of growth, crops are from a week to two weeks in advance of normal. Wheat is from five to sixteen inches high and corn is well above the ground.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD BOY SHOOTS HIS SISTER

BRIDGEWATER, June 1.—Seven-year-old Nora Flynn is in a dangerous condition, the result of being accidentally shot by her five-year-old brother Ralph. The children, with their parents, were visiting their uncle, who lives on High street. Ralph found a 32-calibre revolver. He did not know what it was and in showing it to his sister pulled the trigger. The noise attracted the child's parents and, running into the room, they saw the little girl on the floor and the boy standing over her with the smoking revolver in his hand, laughing with glee and ignorant of what he had done.

Girl Swimmers at Brookline Gym

GIRLS PRAISED AS SWIMMERS

Girls are not only ducky-darlings, but they take to water just like ducks and much more naturally than their brothers, according to George G. Holm, who was for a number of years director of the municipal gymnasium in Brookline.

"Girls are far less timid than boys in the water," he said. "A girl is lighter and more buoyant and has more confidence. In fact, she proves herself superior in everything in the water from the easiest stroke to the difficult Australian crawl."

This is the verdict of an expert.

Mr. Holm continued:

"Very few city boys learn to swim before they are fourteen or fifteen years old. Especially among the boys of the upper classes, when they come in here at that age, they are frightened to death, even to get wet. By the time the water is up to their ankles, their feet are literally good and cold. Their own sisters are not nearly as bad; they learn to swim younger on th average, beginning when they are eight or nine years old, they show much more confidence from start to finish, and make much better swimmers."

The Theory Disputed.

There are several favorite notions that this statement contradicts. First there's that standard rhyme:

> Mother, may I go out to swim?
> Yes, my darling darter;
> Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
> But don't go near the water.

And next there are all those popular myths and reminiscences about the "ole swimmin' hole." Every normal man over twenty-five years old was brought up in the vicinity of a deep and dangerous and forbidden swimming hole, which was the rendezvous for every pair of knickerbockers in that township, every single afternoon all Summer. You never hear anything about the girls coming home with damp hair and wet dresses. But all boys did always. And as for learning how to swim, shucks, they just pushed 'em off the bank, and they swum alright, just as natural as walking.

But of course things are different now, anyway. Men under twenty-five are very different from men over twenty-five.

And all women are different.

Nowadays, women wear harem skirts and earn their own livings, so why shouldn't they swim better than men?

"Gym" Is Popular.

Mr. Holm's statements about his experiences while in charge of the Brookline municipal baths call attention to the plans now on foot for enlarging and extending the $150,000 gymnasium and baths, which are owned and run by the town.

In spite of Brookline's aristocratic reputation, everybody in Brookline frequents the public baths. With a population of less than 30,000, there were over 50,000 bathers in the tanks last year. Go in there any day when the baths are open to women, and you will see the grand dame who drove up in her luxurious limousine, clad in the same scant denim bloomers that are furnished to her cook.

TAFTS TO USE OLD BEVERLY OFFICES

During the stay at Beverly, this Summer, of President Taft the business of the country will be managed from the Board of Trade rooms in the Mason block in Cabot street. This was the Summer capital two years ago, but when Charles Norton became secretary to the President, the former thought the Board of Trade rooms too noisy. Consequently the Pinckney cottage, near the water's edge, was selected. Since then, however, Mr. Norton has gone into the insurance business and the President's secretary is now Charles D. Hilles. Captain Archie Butts, who was here a week ago last Sunday, reported to the President and Mr. Hilles that the Board of Trade room was the most ideal location on account of its easy access to telegraph office, the postoffice and the railroad station. The report of the captain met with the approval of Mr. Taft.

TECH SENIOR WEEK CELEBRATION OPENS

With a dinner at the Copley Square Hotel this evening, senior week at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will begin. It is expected all the 250 members of the graduating class will attend. Salisbury of Chicago, will proceed to the Rogers Building, where Allyne L. Merrill, secretary of the faculty, will notify each member of the class who took the necessary examinations for a degree whether or not he has been successful. On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in Trinity Church, Bishop Lawrence will preach the baccalaureate sermon.

BOYS HELD FOR STATION BREAKS

A puzzling series of burglaries in New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad stations in Dorchester and Quincy was cleared up to-day, the Dorchester police say, when they arrested Eugene Murphy, eighteen, of No. 402 Codman street, and Raymond Donahue, fifteen, of No. 8 Brooks street. The boys will be arraigned to-morrow.

The boys are said to have waited around the stations until they saw the agent go to luncheon at noon or to post lanterns at night. Then they would make a dash inside, break in a panel of the office door, seize all the money that lay around and run away before the agent got back.

FOSS GUEST ON TRAINING SHIP

The Massachusetts nautical training ship Ranger was given a little tuning-up trip down the harbor this afternoon, preparatory to sailing on her five months' voyage to the Azores and European ports Saturday. Governor Foss, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, the Nautical Training School Commissioners, and a large party of legislators accompanied the cadets to-day.

The Governor and his party boarded a tug at Driscoll's landing at 1 o'clock and were taken to the Ranger, off the South Boston flats. Here they were received with the same ceremony that would have been accorded them by regulation man-of-wars men, the ninety-seven cadets being lined up in their nattiest uniforms to greet the distinguished party. On the trip down to Boston Light and back, the cadets and crew were put through their drills by the officers of the training ship.

Coal and provisions will be taken aboard the Ranger to-morrow, and she will sail for the Azores Saturday. From there she will proceed to England, France, Madeira and Bermuda, the long cruise ending at Marblehead next October.

TESTIMONIAL TO MANAGER SMITH

There is every indication that his host of friends in Boston and vicinity intend to give Manager Edward D. Smith a substantial recognition to-night at the Shubert Theatre when the performance of "The Kiss Waltz" is given as a testimonial to him, tendered by the Wilbur-Shubert Company and the Messrs. Shubert. It is the first opportunity that the patrons of the Shubert and the Majestic, thousands of whom have had personal occasion to know of his uniform courtesy, to show in a substantial way in what high esteem he is held.

VETERAN CAMBRIDGE OFFICERS REPLACED

Dallinger. Albert M. Pear, City Clerk for eighteen years, was succeeded by Thomas J. Conrick. A. Frank Montgomery took the place of Frank T. Evans, for twelve years City Messenger.

A Straight, Clean Vote on Canadian Reciprocity the People's Demand

The business people and the general public of the United States have a right to ask and to demand of the Senators of the United States an early vote upon Canadian Reciprocity. The Standard Oil decision and the Tobacco Trust decision, however incomplete, have settled for the season the business mind upon the issues raised by the existence of these monopolies. Business tranquillity and the public interest demand now the settlement of the Reciprocity bill.

There is nothing unreasonable in the demand. Fullest and freest discussion should be allowed in consideration of the great measures which engage the attention of the Senate. Any Senator who desires to talk for or against this or other public measures before that body should have the largest liberty of expression. Any Senator who opposes any one or all of the measures which the House of Representatives has sent to the Senate will realize that the people expect him to express his convictions of public duty and of public policy in his speeches and by his vote.

But the business people and the general public of the United States do not approve the method by which several Senators of the United States now seek to obstruct the popular will by intrigue, by subterfuge or by delay.

Debate, argument, persuasion and the ballot are the engines of representative government—whatsoever is more than these smacketh of treason.

The filibuster is a doubtful, even if an honest, agent in the hands of minorities. This is a government of majorities, and it is difficult to understand how honest Representatives can obstruct the will of the majority, which is representative in nine cases out of ten of the will of the people.

Perhaps at no time in the legislative history of the country have the people been more earnestly desirous of prompt and intelligent ACTION in consideration of great measures so generally understood and so generally approved.

The AMERICAN cannot believe that so able and so sincere a statesman as Robert L. La Follette would become an obstructionist to legislation that is approved in the mind and judgment of the majority of his fellow Representatives.

It is inconsistent with the high character of men like Borah, of Idaho; of Cummins, of Iowa, or of Bristow, of Kansas, to kill by filibuster or delay the Canadian Reciprocity, which the people of this country earnestly desire and which the majority of their fellow Senators are willing to give them.

The House of Representatives, by an overwhelming majority, in which many Republicans joined, sent a straight, clean bill for Reciprocity with Canada to the desk of the American Senate. That bill, created by the popular branch of the American government and heartily favored by the executive branch of the popular government, asks and demands a straight, clean, prompt consideration at the hands of the Senate. It is submitted upon its merits. It is subject to debate, but the whole spirit of our institutions and the genius of our government are thwarted if great Senators stoop to trickery and subterfuge to defeat a majority.

The people ask a vote upon Canadian Reciprocity. They demand "Yea" or "Nay" from the Senators whom they have elected to represent them, and whom they have paid to transact their public business. They have a right, in a measure so important as this, to demand a straight, SINGLE BALLOT upon this single issue.

They see no reason why Canadian Reciprocity, which has excited the widespread interest and approval of the American people, should be "ham-strung" by a lot of amendments that are designed to destroy it.

The Farmers' Free List is in itself a great and honest measure. The AMERICAN heartily favors its passage. But it is a separate measure and should be separately considered upon its own merits, as in its own time it shall have our full support.

There is a clean majority for Canadian Reciprocity in the Senate just as the bill came from the House of Representatives. This no Senator will deny. The AMERICAN asks, in behalf of the American people, that this majority shall have a right to vote.

The people will accept the verdict of this majority without protest or rebellion. But the people will not accept any STRANGLING BY SUBTERFUGE OR DELAY of a measure so near to the great question of the lowered cost of living and of increased and beneficent trade with our nearest national neighbor and friend.

The AMERICAN speaks, we feel sure, for the great majority of our people, regardless of party, in urging the immediate separate consideration of the Reciprocity compact with Canada.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

CIGARETTES AND FIRES

Editor AMERICAN:

More fires and more loss of life are caused by cigarette smokers especially, and smokers generally, than by any other cause. A business experience of forty-five years is my authority for this statement, during which period I have traced fire to these sources many times.

Most of our cotton and warehouse fires have such sources. In my own office we have had several illustrations of how a fire could easily be started, as I regret to say that our clerks are allowed to smoke in business hours—(I am a smoker)—and there have been several waste paper basket fires and damaged carpets through the throwing of matches and ends of cigars in baskets. In most of the lofts and factories cigarettes are smoked surreptitiously.

A big explosion of dynamite recently was caused by careless smokers on the docks. Chauffeurs smoke in garages, which are practically gasoline-soaked. Printers steal away to smoke in corners which are more or less oil-soaked from dripping machinery oil. Dockmen and stevedores work among inflammable merchandise with lighted pipes. Awnings are set on fire by cigars and cigarette stumps thrown from windows of elevated cars.

To sum up, you will find that the consensus of opinion is that most of the losses by fire are caused by tobacco smokers—principally by cigarette fiends and users. And the loss of life in great measure can be laid to the same cause.

WHAT CITY BOYS DON'T KNOW

Editor AMERICAN:

Your city kids think they know a lot, don't they? They may know more than us country kids about electric lights, subways, tunnels and nickel picture shows, etc., and when they come out in the country all dressed up we country kids stand back, shy and admiring; but we soon find they don't know anything. It makes us smile when they talk of sowing corn and planting wheat—and they don't know when it's time to sow or plant or harvest, either. They don't know wheat, rye or oats one from the other when they see it growing; they don't know the difference in the way a horse or a cow lies down or gets up; they cannot tell an ash tree from an oak, nor a poplar from a chestnut; they don't know skunk cabbage from catnip, nor pennyroyal from parsley; they don't know why a squirrel can run down a tree as well as up and a cat can't; they don't know which is the "near" horse nor which is the "off" horse of a team; lots of grown people think they know, but they don't. Only the other day I heard of a woman, born and raised in the city, and she is not only a mother, but a grandmother, who had always thought potatoes grew on vines or stalks above ground. What do you think of that? So when the city kid comes out we will poke fun at him because we now know that we know more than he does.

Truly yours, COUNTRY KID.

The Legislature Should Act Favorably Upon the Boston & Eastern Railway Bill---and Without Delay

The legislative committee has at last reported in FAVOR of an act which will give the Boston & Eastern Railway a right to proceed with the construction of a high speed electric railroad which the North Shore section so much needs.

It cannot be possible that the Legislature will hesitate a single moment to act favorably on the report of the committee.

The conduct of Railroad Commissioners White and Bishop toward the demand of the Boston & Eastern for a certificate is a public scandal. Servile as a majority of this board for years has been to the powerful railroad corporations, yet that servility was never so miserably EXPOSED to the public gaze as in the sullen silence with which they met the clamor of the North Shore for better transportation facilities.

During the last decade the Board of Railroad Commissioners has been growing more and more a public JOKE. Their recommendations on any matter of vital concern to the railroads, or powerful street railways, have come to be considered as little more than the TRANSMITTING of the railroad's statement through them as a public medium.

But the members of this board were never entirely bereft of some semblance of excuse for their actions until they were struck dumb by their pitiable situation in the Boston & Eastern matter. The failure of the railroads and street railways to oppose the Boston & Eastern, seasonably, allowed the board to COMMIT THEMSELVES to the opinion that public necessity required the construction of the Boston & Eastern. Then suddenly the railroad opposition aroused itself, and the public knows the wretched story of the board's conduct ever since.

The Legislature SHOULD NOT DELAY to correct the positive nonfeasance of the Railroad Commissioners. It should be done to correct a flagrant abuse of power by Commissioners White and Bishop. It should be done as a matter of simple justice to the Boston & Eastern. It should be done to relieve the congestion of the communities north of Boston.

Think of the effrontery of a Railroad Commission which has dared to hold up for two years a body of responsible men who propose to build an electric railroad that will carry passengers from Lynn to Boston in fifteen minutes on a clean, comfortable electric train in quicker time and for LESS MONEY than the railroad charges for its own dirty service, and to run more trains and to deliver the passengers, not at the remote ends of the city, but, by an expensive tunnel, to the VERY HEART OF THE CITY at Postoffice square.

What kind of public servants are we tolerating when we permit to continue in office men who would deprive Lynn, Danvers, Peabody, Salem and the adjoining communities of the blessing of a fast electric railroad, because it will compete with a railroad which, under the New Haven management, is watching every chance to reduce its own already poor service, and with a street railway whose crowded cars crawl along, stopping at everybody's back door and reaching Boston from Lynn in an hour and a quarter?

Is it any wonder that even a committee on railroads thinks that this situation ought not to be endured?

None of 'Em Vary So Quickly as Mary

By KENNETT HARRIS

THE moon has her changes; she'll wax and she'll wane.
An April day ranges from sunshine to rain;
The cloud's ever drifting, and changing besides,
The sand's always shifting with winds and with tides.
You know how surprising the mercury is,
And stocks that are rising will never stay riz;
Chameleons alter quite quickly their hue.
And fashion! We falter in reverence due.
We've changes of dockets, opinions and climes,
We've change in our pockets—some of us—at times.
Luck never was stable, no more than our looks,
And few are more able to change than our cooks.

* * *

It's a world of mutation, but nothing can vary
In swift transformation or often as Mary.

Here Is a Man's Idea of an Anti-Suffrage Joke.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

A MAN'S idea of argument is to ask a woman who wants to vote, "What is the referendum?" When she hesitates he tells her, with great pride in his wit, that it isn't made of butter and eggs; neither is it put together with a crochet needle, and her ignorance proves her unfitness for the ballot.

Expanding in his humor, he will tell her further that the initiative isn't bought by the yard at a dry goods store, and the recall is not sold by the pound.

Those who confess ignorance and a determination to learn are the salt of the earth.

What per cent. of this salt is made up of the men?

For hundreds of years men have conducted campaigns in this fashion: They hire bands, give parades, wave banners and flambeaus, and rent halls where candidates make speeches abusing their opposition.

They conduct a campaign by appealing to prejudice. It is not written in American history that the men have ever said:

"Important public questions are to be settled at this election. Let us get together and study them without reference to party or prejudice."

There never was such an appeal, and there never will be, because man will never confess an ignorance on political questions. He swells out like a pouter pigeon on all questions touched at the polls, and walks on faith, for he can't see his legs.

He will not confess his ignorance, because it touches man's domain. He can't crochet or make a pudding and he will admit it with a pride, because crocheting and the mixing of puddings are woman's work; but if he were forced to explain the initiative and the referendum, the recall, the taxation laws, our public utilities bill, privately owned public utilities, etc., he couldn't.

He isn't as familiar with man's domain as a woman is with woman's, and won't confess his ignorance.

The ignorant who refuse to learn are the dangerous element, and the women who confess ignorance and express a desire to learn are not that element. It is up to the women.
